Dr. Einstein Revises.
Mr. Coolidge Elucidates.
Mrs. Bruce Flies.
Mrs. Pappas Laughs.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

AN ENGLISHMAN, beating all records, travels four miles a minute in his automobile on the sands of Florida.

Airplanes have gone six miles a minute.

What will be the ultimate speed at which men will travel around the earth?

Probably about as fast as the sun seems to travel in its journey from east to west, 1,000 miles an hour.

GIANT PLANES will travel in the thin atmosphere, high up above storm and wind, with no motion of the air except a gentle breeze to the east, caused by the rotation of the earth. They will make their own repairs in the air, staying up perhaps two or three years at a time, dropping passengers in smaller airships at their various destinations.

DR. EINSTEIN, scientific puzzle of the century, refers to the great scientists of this period as his "forerunners" leading up to his incomparable achievement.

Those thus disposed of include Prof. Michelson, of Chicago. How high Dr. Einstein will stay in the estimation of science one hundred years hence, no one knows. But it is not at all certain that his services to science will be found equal to those of Prof. Michelson, one of actual, concrete achievement.

It was Prof. Michelson who first measured exactly the length of a ray in the spectrum, establishing permanent, exact measurement for all time.

It was he who corrected measurement of the speed of light, "yard stick" of the universe, essential to all astronomical calculations. And Michelson, in an experiment of infinite delicacy and difficulty, established the rigidity of the earth, about equal to that of a solid ball of steel, 25,000 miles round.

Dr. Einstein's recent announcement that he revises his opinions on the universe, which he had formerly circumscribed and limited arbitrarily, is important.

After talking with the gathering of American scientists in Los Angeles, he changed his personal arrangement of the universe, showing that his conclusions were not based on positive knowledge.

Nobody has ever changed anything in Newton's formula, "directly as the mass and inversely as the square of the distance."

CONSIDERING THAT people of the Jewish race make up less than one-half of one per cent of earth's population, it is interesting to note that the two greatest living scientists are probably Michelson and Einstein, both Jews.

Others may excel them in certain branches, Jeans and Eddington in astronomy, for instance. But a vote of all the scientists in the world would place Einstein and Michelson at the top.

CALVIN COOLIDGE, whose writings have made his name better known than ever, tells readers of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and other newspapers that "the problem of agriculture has seemed so much the disposition of surplus production, that very little public thought has been given to soil exhaustion.

"Every year this country takes from the earth five and three quarter millions more tons of plant food than is put back into the soil."

THE QUESTION of soil exhaustion can easily be remedied. A little intelligence, planting crops that supply nitrogen, ploughing under, instead of harrowing, humous material.

In France wheat has been cultivated on the same land for 200 years, and the land produces more now than ever.

The big problem, surplus production, can be solved only by increase in population. If we had 50 million more population in the United States there would be no surplus food problem, no good second hand automobiles unsold, no prosperity problem either.

France, smaller than one of our states, with 40 million population, is the most prosperous country in the world. But our geese, in Congress, on farms and in labor unions, are afraid to admit the human beings that this country needs.

A WONDERFUL woman, Mrs. Victor Bruce, who landed here after flying 18,000 miles around the world. Today she sails home to England, via Paris, landing by airplane at Croyden Field.

Mrs. Bruce had never flown, when she saw an airplane that struck her fancy in the window of a shop. She asked the clerk:

"Do you think I could fly around the world in that machine? How quickly could I learn to fly?"

He said:

"Certainly, you could fly around the world. It will not take you long to learn to fly."

She learned to fly in a week, bought the machine, started off, leaving her husband and 10-year-old child, and here she is.

Men little know what power is locked up in women, going to waste during the last million years.

MRS. RUTH PAPPAS, who lives in Chicago, laughs occasionally when she looks at her husband. On Wednesday in their West Harrison street house, while she darned socks, her husband John told a friend that no holdup men "could get away with me." In walked three holdup men, one holding

BLAST ROCKS THEATER, 30 INJURED

Actor's Jest Averts Panic In Packed House at Film Premiere in Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Thirty persons were injured, several seriously, and a panic in a theater audience of more than 2,000 was narrowly averted when an explosion in a power main in front of the Orpheum Theater shook the building late last night.

So terrific was the blast that several persons standing in front of the theater were lifted into the air and others were hurled against store windows. A portion of the street was torn up and windows smashed.

The seriously injured were George Delk, 30, taxicab driver, fractured skull; Vito Vitullo, 25, actor, burns and lacerations, and Betty Deter, 12; Earl William O'Dell, 27, Negro chauffeur, and T. P. Ewing, 39, salesman, all burned.

THEATER PACKED

A first night audience, agumented by the presence of more than 1,100 motion picture players, packed the theater for the premiere of "Cimarron." Many film stars were on the stage in personal appearances when the explosion shocked the theater.

The audience laughed and grew calm. The show goers filed out in an orderly manner a short time later, when squads of police and firemen took charge of the situation.

TAXI BLOWN IN AIR

Delk's taxicab, parked in front of the theater and bearing a passenger, was hurled into the air, landing amid a throng of persons at the theater entrance. The machine stood directly over a manhole, the cover of which was driven through the car's flooring by the explosion.

The blast was due to accumulation of gas in the power main, according to H. E. Walker, member of the fire prevention bureau, attending the performance.

POLICEMAN LIFTED IN AIR

A patrolman, J. C. Strange, told of being blown high into the air by the blast. He said:

"I felt myself leaving the ground and soaring upward. Then I landed in the midst of a crowd on the sidewalk."

He was not seriously injured.

The cars of several motion picture luminaries, including the star of the picture, Richard Dix, and those of Mack Sennett and Constance Bennett, were parked near the taxicab that bore the brunt of the explosion. They were slightly damaged.

EAST END CHAIN STORE HELD UP

An Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company store, at Lincoln and Rowan avenues, East End, was held up and robbed by two armed bandits this morning. Mrs. J. J. Scott, wife of the manager, and clerk in the store, was alone at the time of the robbery.

She said:

"The two men, both young, came into the store. One of them said 'Stick them up.' I raised my hands and he told me to hand over the money. He cleaned out all the change in the cash register and told me to give him the bags. I gave him one of them, and they left."

Mencken Darts Arouse Ire Of Arkansas Statesmen

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Feb. 7.—(AP.)—A new attack on Henry L. Mencken, editor of the American Mercury, broke out this afternoon in the Arkansas House of Representatives, one member wanting to demand an apology from "that jackass" and another suggesting that "we have a few minutes of prayer" for him.

It all started earlier in the day when the House adopted a joint resolution condemning Mencken for a recent article criticizing Arkansas in the Baltimore Evening Sun.

Mencken added fuel to the flame with the comment on the resolution:

"I didn't make Arkansas the butt of ridicule—God did it."

Representative Johnston read Mencken's cryptic comment to the House this afternoon and moved that the speaker:

"Demand an apology from that jackass."

Representative Alexander sought to soothe the irate members. Representative Fleming then suggested:

CANNON TRIAL NEARS END

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Investigation of the charges against Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, went into its fifth day here today with the accused bishop completing his defense.

Members of the committee hearing the accusations frankly admitted they were "tired and wanted to go home." Members of the bishop's family said his physical condition apparently was improving in spite of the 15-hour sessions held each day.

As soon as Bishop Cannon completes his defense, the committee will begin balloting on the charges, which are grouped under six heads. If eight of the 12 ministers on the committee find that any one of the six has weight the bishop will be held for trial before the general conference of the church in 1934, and will be suspended from duty until that time.

RELIEF PACT BARS EXTRA SESSION

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON, International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—The compromise drought relief settlement, under which a $20,000,000 fund will be provided for food loans to stricken farmers, paved the way today to an orderly adjournment of the dying seventy-first Congress, unless the insurgent bloc of the Senate foments an unexpected revolt.

BROOKHART PROTESTS

The new drought relief plan had the indorsement of the White House and of Republican and Democratic leaders in House and Senate. Only an insurgent, Senator Brookhart (Rep.), of Iowa, protested it was "unsatisfactory" and not certain to relieve starvation conditions in the drought areas. Brookhart insisted the appropriation be made outright instead of for loans to drought sufferers. He declared:

"I am against loans when people are starving. I want to see a bill enacted, buying food for every starving citizen. We did it for citizens in other countries and we should do it for starving Americans."

GAG RULE THREATENED

Having pacified Democratic leaders, the administration was prepared to deal harshly with any insurgent rebellion. Under present plans, any filibustering tactics by the insurgents against appropriation bills will be met by invoking the seldom-used "gag rule" of cloture, which limits debate and throttles dilatory maneuvers. Consequently administration leaders hopefully boasted there was no longer any danger of a special session after March 4.

The $20,000,000 flood loan measure will settle the chief controversy between White House and Senate.

SUCCOP PLAN OF OUTSIDE BUYING HIT

Pittsburgh Merchant Dares Experts to Show Parke Products Are Better

As more evidence was being gleaned from official records to show that one firm apparently has a monopoly at higher-than-average wholesale prices on canned food sold to the city, John D. Houston, Pittsburgh wholesaler, today defied Director B. L. Succop, of the department of supplies, to publicly conduct his "blindfold" test to determine quality.

Succop had contended the L. H. Parke Company, of Philadelphia, got the majority of contracts because scientific tests by dieticians at Mayview City Hospital indicated superior quality.

An investigation of the source of food products used by state institutions disclosed that at least three Pittsburgh firms are able to meet the state's exacting requirements as to quality, and are now filling state contracts, although Succop finds it necessary, he says, to buy from the Philadelphia concern to get high quality.

The contract lists, disclosing the alleged Parke monopoly, were made available by City Controller James P. Kerr.

Council is expected to ask Succop at its meeting Monday concerning accusations made against him in a letter written President John S. Herron. Houston asserts the Parke Company was favored in contracts awarded by Succop, and declared the official discriminated against local bidders.

SUCCOP STRESSES QUALITY

"Sour grapes," at not winning the contract, according to the Director, prompted the letter from Houston.

Admitting that some awards were not given lowest bidders, Succop declared quality was paramount in the selections, made by a "blindfold test" by a number of doctors, dieticians and institutional officials and then approved by him. The Parke products, he related, appealed to him as the best after test and influenced his selections.

SEEKS PUBLIC TEST

Houston today augmented his letter on Succop's activities with the following questions he said

American Girl Wins Wales' Favor at Panama Dance

PANAMA CITY, Feb. 7.—A pretty dark-haired brown-eyed American girl captured the fancy of the Prince of Wales, who danced with her most of last evening on the pavilion of the Union Club overlooking beautiful Panama Bay.

She is Miss Eleanor Nichols, of Newport, daughter of Commander Newton Lord Nichols, in charge of the Balboa naval radio station. She spent most of the evening during the dance for the two princes in the arms of the Prince of Wales.

He bent low above her, while the bright moon shone over the bay of Panama and the palms waved in the breeze, and sang a popular song played by the orchestra, "Without You," into her ear as they danced.

The Prince of Wales selected Miss Nichols almost as soon as he arrived at the club. Prince George, the younger brother, was especially attentive to Miss Cecilia Alfaro, pretty niece of the President. Shortly after 1 o'clock both had to leave and go aboard the Oropesa which took them on toward Peru, the next stop in their South American tour.

TOWN HALL SITE FOES TO OPPOSE APPROVAL BY COUNCIL

HEARING AIM OF THREE GROUPS

Will Insist City Lawmakers Use Discretionary Power; Zoning Phase Discussed

With county authorities preparing to get a consent ordinance on the town hall into City Council Monday morning, the downtown, North Side and Schenley Farms groups fighting against the Nicola site have announced that they will at once ask for a hearing.

Meeting yesterday afternoon at the Colonial Trust Company, 16 prominent citizens decided they would make the protest both as organizations and taxpayers of their respective districts.

They say the wording of the state act making the consent ordinance necessary will be called to Council's attention, and Council will be called upon to use discretionary power in the problem and not treat the consent ordinance as a mere matter of form.

SEES NO ZONE PROBLEM

County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong says the county solicitor will go ahead with the legal work necessary to obtain the consent of the city to the location of the Town Hall at Fifth and Ruskin avenues. Asked whether it would be necessary to take the zoning limitations question into City Council, he said:

"Not necessarily. The hall can be built inside the prescribed building lines. Those set-backs will serve to give the hall a more attractive appearance."

The zoning board of adjustment may have powers broad enough to give a decision on the entire zoning angle as related to the Town Hall, those well informed on zoning matters say. The board of adjustment is composed of Wilmer M. Jacoby, chairman; J. W. Cree, Jr., and W. C. Rice. Jacoby is an active member of the downtown town hall group.

LAWYERS VOICE DOUBT

A majority in the board of adjustment may change set-back lines, but lawyers express doubt as to whether the board would have the right to change the classification of a district such as the 239x120 feet of residential property at the Bigelow boulevard end of the Nicola lot.

Most of the site, 239x469 feet at the Fifth avenue end of the lot is zoned as "A," which permits the building of large apartments and structures such as the town hall.

NEW YORK PRECEDENT

There is a possibility that a majority in the adjustment board might have the power to make the entire lot an "A" district. A similar case was decided several years ago in New York, giving the zoning board the right to extend a classification of property where all the ground was in a single block.

Should the city law department rule that the adjustment board could not change the classification of the property, the matter would go to city council and require seven out of nine votes and the mayor's signature to amend the zoning ordinance. A ruling by the adjustment board may be appealed to court.

Defies City to Stage Food Test

he would present to Council when the inquiry is made:

1—Will Mayview dieticians give a practical demonstration of grading unidentified canned goods before Council in the presence of newspapermen, to determine if Parke products rank higher than other quality material?

2—Why should the city, when no other institution, state or private, does so, use Parke's name to describe goods when asking for bids?

3—Why merchandise acceptable to dieticians in good Pittsburgh hospitals, where patients pay for it, is not acceptable to dieticians at Mayview, where patients do not pay?

4—Why Succop wrote "selected" after Parke awards, when he allegedly did not examine other samples?

5—When were wholesalers last asked for canned goods samples?

Houston said he has bid, but was asked for no samples during 1930.

Succop announced yesterday that at least 80 per cent of the state institutions were using Parke products because of their "high quality."

A check on records of the State Department of Supplies at Harrisburg disclosed that for a period from November 1, 1930, to April 1, 1931, the Parke company holds contracts to supply 40 per cent of the state grocery commodities required.

James F. Malone, one-time city director of the Bureau of Supplies and now holding a like position for the state under the Pinchot administration, in answer to a question as to his policy at the time he filled Succop's job, said he had always bought as much as possible in Pittsburgh.

Contracts for 1931 for city institutions' foodstuffs have not yet been awarded. The large contract, amounting to several thousand dollars annually, is supplemented by a monthly bill of goods needed to replenish supplies exhausted during each 30-day period. In these monthly contracts as high as from eight to 12 bidders have sought the city's favor, Succop said.

CITES SUPERIORITY

Succop informed the city controller he purchased "selected qualities." He also told the controller the quality of the one brand was much superior and that sometimes cans were not well filled.

The controller said he was to be notified when goods were to be examined. So far this month he has received no word and as a result presumed that no awards had been made.

Records in the controller's office of bidders and awards for 1929 and 1930 disclosed that five concerns had placed bids. They were Libby, McNeill and Libby Company, the Parke Company, Houston Company, A. H. Brahm and Marcus Company.

The Parke organization in nearly every case was the successful bidder, although in many instances not the highest or the lowest.

BIDS REVEALED

Three hundred dozen No. 10 size canned apples, per dozen, Libby, McNeill and Libby, $5; Parke, $5.56, awarded contract; Houston, $5.80, and Marcus, $5.15.

Two hundred dozen No. 2, apple butter, per dozen, Libby, McNeill and Libby, $5.35, awarded contract; Parke, $6.99; Brahm, $6.53, and Marcus, $5.90.

Two hundred dozen green beans, per dozen, Libby, McNeill and Libby, $6.35; Parke, $8.10, awarded contract; Houston, $7.80, and Marcus, $6.10.

One hundred forty dozen blackberries, per dozen, Libby, $6; Parke, $6.21, awarded contract; Houston, $6.85; Brahm, $7.25, and Marcus, $6.50.

Two hundred fifty dozen prunes, per dozen, Libby, $8.50, and Parke, $8.86, awarded contract.

One hundred and fifty dozen peas, per dozen, Libby, $12; Parke, $9.68, awarded contract, and Marcus, $12.55.

Twenty-five dozen cans mincemeat, per dozen, Libby, $13.65; Parke, 14.38, awarded contract, and Brahms, $13.22.

Three hundred dozen tomato soup, per dozen, Libby, $4.60; Parke, $4.09, awarded contract; Houston, $5.05, and Marcus, $4.70.

BONUS BACKERS WILL CONTEST COMPROMISE

Foes Proceed With Plan to Increase Loan Value and Cut Rate of U. S. Interest

By WILLIAM S. NEAL,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—While administration leaders of the House went forward today with their plan for a compromise on cash payment of the soldiers' "bonus," the militant original backers of the cash payment served notice they would fight it.

The compromise plan, which includes increasing the loan value of certificates, is understood to have been approved by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

Although Mellon has flatly opposed changes in the present law under which adjusted service compensation certificates are payable in 1945, he is said to be willing to raise their loan value to aid needy veterans.

The House leaders' plan was laid before the treasury by Rep. Bacharach (Rep.), of New Jersey, after he had predicted the compromise plan would be enacted in 10 days.

$500,000,000 COST

By increasing the loan value from 22 to 44 to 50 per cent and reducing the interest rate from 6 to 4 per cent, aid would be given to needy veterans, Bacharach maintained. Cost of the plan would be under $500,000,000 and would entail little treasury financing.

Representative Patman (Dem.), of Texas, who has led the fight for immediate cash payment of the $3,500,000,000 of adjusted service certificates, spurned the compromise.

YOUNG PLAN REJECTED

The plan, he said, would permit veterans to borrow, on the average, about $280 more than they now may borrow. He contended the interest on their loans will eat up the certificates by the time of maturity in 1945.

The proposal of Owen D. Young, chairman of the General Electric Company, that partial cash payment be made to needy veterans has been rejected by both administration leaders and the Patman group. The plan, Patman maintained, would force veterans to make "a paupers' oath."

SHOUSE VOWS JOB BILL AID

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Jouett Shouse, chairman of the national Democratic executive committee, told a Democratic rally here tonight his party would guarantee legislation dealing with unemployment at the beginning of the next session of Congress unless this short session passes such measures. He said:

"Unless this short session of Congress passes the measures that embody the basic program of the Wagner bills, I can assure you that the Democratic party will guarantee that legislation at the very beginning of the next session."

Shouse blamed "the lack of leadership on the part of the President of the United States" for the "unutterable" confusion at Washington. He also predicted that the Democratic party would take a definite stand on prohibition, probably for a change, at the next convention.

Bernacchi was to have appeared before a federal judge last Wednesday morning on the liquor charge, but arrived in the afternoon, explaining that he had been detained at the police graduating exercises.

When the robbery was reported to police, Patrolman Joseph Thompson, of the East End Police Station, said the description of the men tallied with that of two suspicious-looking men whom he had chased through the streets of East End last night. They escaped after he fired a shot at them.

County detectives today were without trace of the five bandits who invaded the South Park barbecue stand in Broughton road, at the entrance to South Park, and escaped after slugging the proprietor and robbing his wife of jewelry valued at $5,400 last night.

PROPRIETOR SLUGGED

The five bandits stopped their automobile in front of the barbecue stand and walked into the place with drawn revolvers, detectives said. The leader of the gang struck John Kunkle, the proprietor, on the head with the butt end of a revolver as one of his accomplices walked to the cash register and rifled it of $37. Another ordered Kunkle's wife to hand over two diamond rings, one valued at $3,500 and another valued at $1,500, and a $400 wrist watch.

Robbers Loot Three Homes in East End

Three Squirrel Hill homes were broken into and robbed last night while their owners were absent.

Frank P. Tawney's home at 1301 Melvin street was robbed of three diamond rings and the home of M. A. Hanlon, of 7010 Thomas boulevard, was robbed of $300 wearing apparel.

3 FIRES CAUSE $7,500 LOSS

A fireman was injured while combatting flames which caused damage estimated at $5,000 to the Army and Navy store conducted by Harry Workman in 1003 Main street, Sharpsburg, early today. Lieut. Samuel Fair, of Sharpsburg police, discovered the fire and turned in the alarm. Emil Schultz, of Chapman street, a member of the volunteer fire department, was hurt on the hand and taken to the office of a physician. Lieut. Fair estimated the damage.

The Sewickley Heights fire department extinguished a roof fire on a cow barn of the B. F. Jones, Jr., estate in the Blackburn road, Sewickley Heights, late yesterday. Prize cattle were not endangered by the blaze, according to firemen, who estimate the damage at $1,000.

The fan house at an Allegheny Steel Company coal mine near Cambridge street, Natrona Heights, was destroyed by fire late yesterday. The Hill Top Hose Company, of Natrona Heights, combatted the flames. The loss was estimated at $1,500 by police.

Two families were forced to flee when fire of undetermined origin partly destroyed a three-story brick building at Sixth and Vermont streets, Glassport, early today.

Starting in a chapel on the third floor occupied by the Church of Christ, the flames spread to the second and first floors, forcing the families to flee and damaging storerooms beneath.

A second alarm was answered by firemen early today when embers ignited material in a storeroom at the same address. Damage was estimated at $4,000.

HIGH COSTS OF NYE QUIZ REVEALED

By FULTON LEWIS,
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Senator Gerald P. Nye's Senatorial Campaign Investigating Committee, which spent $96,503.12 in 14 states, expended more in Illinois on the Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick inquiry than it did on all the others combined, a recapitulation of its expense account showed today.

Of $55,728.48 spent by the Nye committee in specific investigation work in various states, $29,350.16 was used in the Illinois investigation, the report revealed. Of this sum, a salary of $500 a month and expenses, for seven months, went to a night watchman named H. J. Loose, employe of a Chicago newspaper.

EXCEEDS CANDIDATES' COSTS

The expense account, regrouped today to show expenditures by states, disclosed that in a number of states the committee spent more in its investigation than the candidate under investigation spent in his election campaign. And in several states, the account shows, the Nye committee spent more than both candidates combined.

Among these states were Nebraska, where the committee spent $6,574, according to its records, while the campaign of Senator George W. Norris cost $294. In Tennessee it expended $3,503.33, while the two senatorial candidates spent a total of $375.

Items of $106.78 for newspapers, $41 for periodicals, and $151.63 in salaries to clerks employed to clip them, were listed.

MET IN COSTLY HOTEL

The account shows the committee held sessions for several days in August, 1930, in a fashionable hotel in Glacier National Park, Mont., with bills totaling $1,368.80, including railroad transportation. One member of the committee, Senator Dale, of Vermont, had to take a $420 railroad trip from his home to attend these sessions.

The committee heard no witnesses at this session, according to the records.

The regrouping of the account shows that in investigating the Illinois campaign, Senator Nye called 11 open hearings, one in Washington May 1, and the rest in Chicago, continuing as late as September 18.

GENERAL EXPENSES SHOWN

The sum which the records show for direct expenditure for the Illinois investigation is $29,350.16, slightly more than half of the total expenditure for such purposes in all other states. Aside from specific expenditures the account shows a total of $40,774.64, for general expenditures such as clerical work and other general maintenance of the whole investigation organization.

The committee's expenses in the New Jersey inquiry were $1,805.89 it is revealed, but only one public hearing of witnesses was recorded and that was in New York City, a month after the election.

19 INVESTIGATORS USED

The high cost of Senate campaign investigations is shown by a compilation of items in the account revealing that at times, the committee had 19 investigators at work, each receiving about $500 a month.

The committee had one secretary, one clerk, one stenographer, and two assistant clerks at a total salary of $1,150 a month. It paid Chicago accountants $3,118.64 for auditing campaign expenses there, and it spent $6,498.57 in stenographic reports of testimony. It purchased a steel safe for $201.96.

Mrs. Renaldo Says Babe Has Royal Manchu Blood

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Mrs. Suzette Renaldo, seeking to retain custody of her 4-year-old son and obtain an increase from $50 to $200 monthly alimony from Duncan Renaldo film actor, has testified she believed the lad had royal Manchu blood in his veins.

Renaldo contended his wife's mental condition made her an unfit person to care for the child, while Mrs. Renaldo alleged the actor was attempting to take the child from her because she brought suit for $50,000 against Edwina Booth, film actress, charging alienation of affections. She said on the witness stand yesterday:

"I am convinced the baby has the pure Manchu blood in his veins. Duncan told me his mother was part Manchu, and he has a scar on his forehead, covered by his hair, which is the mark of the Manchu dynasty—the dynasty that ruled China before the revolution."

Renaldo's attorney pressed for more details but the court stopped the questioning, observing that Mrs. Renaldo "might believe her child an anthropoid ape and still be a good mother."

Hoover Signs Bill to Aid Disabled War Hero

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—President Hoover's pen, signing a bill which took seven years to pass, has made Herman Lincoln Chatkoff, disabled World War air hero, a "Soldier of the United States," although he never served in the United States Army.

Chatkoff today began a pension of $100 a month, with right to hospitalization and other veterans' benefits. Although he won in battle numerous decorations, Chatkoff was for 13 years without a country to acknowledge his sacrifice.

He was a member of the French Lafayette Escadrille. He had taken an examination for transfer from the French to the American armies, but before the transfer was consummated, he was crushed in a plane wreck so badly that he could serve no more.

Chatkoff was an American citizen, born in Massachusetts. He now is being cared for by friends on a farm near Manassas, Va., for he remains totally incapacitated for work.

Bank System Public Servant, Coolidge Says

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Feb. 7.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

We do not often think what an important service for all the people is performed by the banks. When matters are going smoothly we naturally take results for granted. We assume that in some way banking goes on under its own power something like the flow of water or the rays of the sun.

Calvin Coolidge

But our banking system works with a high degree of efficiency because of the skill and industry of the men who conduct it. Scarcely two generations have passed since bank currency was unified and stabilized. Under the old state systems all kinds of bank notes of uncertain value circulated. Now every bank note is worth its face value.

The supply of credit is of enormous importance. In the younger parts of the nation towns prosper or decline according to the character of the men who operate the banks. We have bank failures, but there is no safer place outside the government to keep money. Our banking system is not yet perfect, but on the whole it is sound and well managed. Governmental and private studies are constantly being made for its improvement. It furnishes the sound currency, abundant credit and facility of exchange which are the life blood of commerce. The people have no more important public servant.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

De Voe Case Publicity Fails To Damage Her; Daisy Awaits Parole Hearing

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 7. — (AP.)—Clara Bow's studio allayed all rumors that the screen flapper is "through in pictures" because of sensational publicity during the Daisy De Voe trial, with the announcement today that her next starring vehicle will go into production before the end of February.

Miss Bow's illness, which kept her away from court during the latter part of her former secretary's trial on charges of grand theft, is all that is holding up the production, studio officials said. The scenario has been completed.

Miss De Voe said during the trial that studio officials had warned Clara "one more slam in the papers would finish her." She also gave several intimate glimpses of Clara's home life, and one production, in which Miss Bow was to have been the star, got under way with a substitute in the lead.

Miss De Voe is awaiting a hearing on her petition for probation filed after she was denied a new trial. The was convicted on one count of stealing $825 from Clara.

PHILA. GROUP PLEADS FOR MARINE

Italian Envoy Reported As Asking Stimson's Aid In Having Case Dropped

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Pleas for "brakes on the court-martial" of Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler were reported from two quarters today, one of them tangible, the other impossible to confirm. The first came from members of the Philadelphia commission which once placed a tablet in the Navy Building testifying to the "impartiality, courage and incorruptibility" of Butler. They petitioned President Hoover to call off the court-martial.

The other report was to the effect a flying visit the Italian ambassador to America, Nobile Giacomo De Martino, paid Secretary of State Stimson was for the purpose of asking that proceedings against the marine be dropped.

LEGAL STAFF READY

Meanwhile, Butler had organized a four-man legal staff to prepare his defense before court-martial in Philadelphia February 16.

His counsel, Maj. Henry Leonard, announced from Philadelphia that the marine who must face charges growing out of his reference to Premier Mussolini of Italy as a hit-and-run driver had added three attorneys to his staff.

They were Roland S. Morris, of Philadelphia, a former ambassador to Japan and a vice-chancellor of the American Bar Association; Col. A. M. Holding, of Chester, Pa., and Lieut. Col. Jesse F. Dyer of the Marine Corps.

ROUNDS UP WITNESSES

Leonard may remain in Philadelphia over the week-end, rounding up witnesses for the Butler court-martial. His client is at Quantico, Va., marine barracks, under arrest. Conferences between the members of Butler's defense staff were to begin today.

Italian embassy officials said the ambassador went to see the Secretary to "discuss some matters," but would not disclose what.

Officials pointed out Premier Mussolini replied to the apology for Butler's reference extended by the State Department with the concise statement that the matter was "forgotten," and that such would be far from the case should defense in the Butler trial be allowed to place desired witnesses on the stand.

Norman Krebs, Jr., 10, of 2984 Rutherford street, Baldwin Township, to whom police rushed oxygen tanks yesterday, was still in a serious condition in his home today. Joseph S. Thompson, son of the late Col. Joseph H. Thompson, of Beaver Falls, was acquitted of aggravated assault and battery in connection with the injury of an East End woman in an automobile accident, late yesterday on instructions of Judge Frank Patterson.

'Kid Brother,' 87, Contests Marriage of Man, 91

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—The wedding of Theodore Wells, 91, and Anna Naylor, 46, was under consideration by Judge Daniel P. Trude today, following arguments in an annullment action instituted by Herbert Wells, 87, referred to by defense counsel as the older man's "kid brother."

Herbert Wells, who lives in Kingston, R. I., charged that Miss Naylor, who had been Theodore's nurse for 10 years, married Theodore last August for his money. He had inherited $60,000 from his first wife. The Rhode Island man also charged that his brother's bride had spent $7,500 of the inheritance.

Attorney Sidney Gorman, representing Mrs. Wells, told the court she was not the type of woman who would "squander the money." He said:

"Anyway, the kid brother is probably jealous because Theodore has such an attractive wife."

Miss Lowry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hix, Mt. Lebanon, formerly of Atlanta, whose engagement to William Mayo Page, Clarksdale, Miss., has just been made public.

Society Folk Visit West And South

Even though the chill rain reminds one of early spring, folks are leaving for the South and West instead of returning.

Today I want to talk first about some more folks who've gone out West. The Thomas W. Smiths, the H. N. Van Voorhises and the Stewart Johnsons are all in Pasadena, Cal., and are stopping at the Huntington Hotel. Mrs. Samuel D. Hubbard is at Pasadena too, sojourning at the Maryland Hotel.

Recent arrivals at St. Petersburg, Fla., include the E. R. Brauns, Mrs. M. L. Byrnes, the J. Porters, the E. O. Byrnses and Miss E. M. Edwards.

Of much interest is the announcement of the engagement of Mary Barbara Shiras, daughter of Mrs. MacGilvray Shiras, of Aylesboro avenue, and Karl Adams Dietrich, son of the Gustav Dietrichs, of Detroit. Mary attended the Spence School in New York. She will make known the wedding date later.

Dormont New Century May Buy Home

Dormont New Century Club's building committee has been authorized to investigate one of several houses which are for sale, with a view to purchasing it for a club home.

At the regular club meeting in Dormont Masonic Hall yesterday afternoon, Mrs. John H. Bricker voluntarily reported several which are on the market.

The program in charge of the literary department, followed an exciting business session in which the nominating committee was elected and action to determine when a retiring president is retired was tabled. The nominating committee consists of Mrs. Donald P. Maxwell, Mrs. C. Warren Kinder, Mrs. G. D. Francisco, Mrs. Phil A. Franklin and Mrs. Charles Porter.

Four round tables furnished the program fare. Mrs. Richard B. Perry and Mrs. H. H. Heinrich, chairman of literature, conducted one on novels; Mrs. Ross E. Taggart and Mrs. Francisco a second on essays and poetry; Mrs. E. E. Houghtelin, Mrs. T. M. Stahlman and Mrs. G. B. Roberts one on current events, while Mrs. C. W. Sheck and Mrs. C. K. Harvey led the fourth on drama.

Mrs. Perry's group discussed what features distinguish the novel of today from that of yesterday, whether it is more or less moral than the novel of the past, whether the novelist should consider his audience, whether the modernist is honest and what makes for popularity in a book. Mrs. S. W. Corcoran reviewed Elizabeth Madox Roberts' "The Great Meadow."

Mrs. Taggart spoke chiefly of Frances Lester Warner and Agnes Repplier, comparing these two essayists, and Mrs. Francisco touched the high spots in the poetry of the last 100 years. At the current events table such topics as the Town Hall, the Wickersham Report, Mussolini and drought relief were taken up and the drama group talked of movies and plays. A reduction in the price of theater tickets was predicted and especial praise was spoken for the manner in which the South Hills Harris Theater has co-operated with the women in the choice of films.

Mrs. Houghtelin announced a benefit desert bridge for the scholarship fund at her home on Friday afternoon, February 20.

DESIGNERS SHOW NEWEST MODE IN FABRIC HANDBAGS

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Feb. 7.—There should be much charm and chic in a lady's handbag, whatever the other contents may be. Time was when a bag was strictly a utilitarian affair made of practical leather on a sturdy, plain frame. But we have traveled far from that time and today the bag is not only beautiful and costly, but has become an integral part of the costume. For we do not snatch just any handbag to complete our costume, for that accessory is most carefully planned to harmonize and complete the street attire. And it doesn't seem likely, judging by the latest output from the leading designers, that the bag will ever sink back to its former lowly estate. Of course, Hermes and other leather people are showing bags made of fine leathers, exquisitely ornamented, but many other establishments are showing bags made of silk and other fabrics. All are neat and practical, though, for the vastly ornamental purse doesn't seem to be all-important at the moment. Certainly one sees bags of doeskin and antelope decked with marcasite and semi-precious stones. But, just the same, the fabric pocketbook is attracting much attention.

* * *

SHOWN TODAY are sketches of some of the new purses. They are by Worth. At the top of the drawing are two views of a rather large purse in black crepe de chine. The wide strap may be slipped over the wrist or turned down over the side of the purse. A large flat button of the material acts as a pivot around which the strap turns and there is a large jade ball on top. Dark blue faille makes the pouched shaped bag shown in the same sketch. The handle is rigid and covered with the faille. A small brass fastener, which turns to close the bag, is placed on the edge of the flap between the stitched pieces forming the base of the handle.

* * *

FOR GOOD MEASURE we have included a sketch of a hat that is featured in Mme. Jose's advance mid-season collection. The body of the hat is of black felt with narrow brim turning back from the forehead and edged with black straw lace. A slight suggestion of the tricorne is obtained by the pinch at each side and the pinched front, which is also marked with a double diamond pin.

The Los Angeles appeared over Colon at 9:20 p. m. and slowly circled the city, its sleek, silver sides glistening in the play of searchlights.

Below us we could see the thousands of upturned faces of natives eager to glimpse the huge airship that will take part in the Navy maneuvers in the Caribbean.

DRY LAW VOTE ADVOCATED

FRESNO, Cal., Feb. 7.—(AP.)—A referendum on repeal of the national prohibition act, U. S. District Judge Paul J. McCormick, a member of the Wickersham Commission said, would indicate the present attitude of the nation and would aid in bringing about some change from the present unsatisfactory national conditions.

Judge McCormick, in a statement, said until provisions of the national prohibition act were reconciled and made to apply uniformly to all intoxicating beverages, there would be resentment against the law.

Judge McCormick declined to comment directly on the sale of fruit juices by Fruit Products, Inc., a government financed organization, or to discuss legal points involved. He pointed out, inferentially, that beer and hard liquor drinkers would resent the sale of juices that later become wine.

He said:

"If the American public will read the Wickersham report, sentiment will be crystalized and a change in the law can be brought about. If the public does not read the report, it is doubtful if the labors of the commission will be very fruitful."

STIMSON LAUDS U. S. POLICY

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Secretary of State Stimson upholds the Latin-American policy of the United States as a safeguard to the independence and welfare of the southern republics.

Its fundamental principles, he asserts, are the Monroe doctrine, the agreement with Central American republics not to recognize any government established through revolution, and the embargo on shipment of arms to rebels opposed to an established republic.

In two addresses last night—one before the Council of Foreign Relations and the other over a nationwide hook-up of the Columbia Broadcasting System—he defended the State Department's recognition of seven Latin-American governments, setup by revolution in the past two years, and explained its attitude.

The Central American agreement, he stated, has prevented bloodshed by removing the chief reward for revolution on the isthmus.

Seventy miles south of this city an automobile collided with a motorboat which was traveling on the flooded main street.

ALMA RUBENS 'STOPPED' SHOW

Ridiculous Mishap Threw Audience Into Throes of Mirth; 'Broncho Billy' Wild

By ALMA RUBENS.

CHAPTER VIII.

On opening night I arrived at the theater early. I put on my costume, carefully arranging my precious symmetricals so they would appear to the best advantage. They looked sort of bulgy, but I was determined to make good. And, if one had to wear symmetricals to become a hit, Rose La France would wear them—or bust.

Miss Rubens

The curtain went up.

Catlett and Zoe made their entrance, spoke their opening lines and retreated, which was the signal for the chorus to appear from the wings on either side.

I was third from the end on the left hand side, opposite where Broncho Billy stood behind a curtain where he could observe everything without being seen by the audience.

Blithely, I skipped into position. At last I was before the footlights. Rose La France's premiere. Rose La France, who was to electrify the world.

And then, my house of cards tumbled.

Before we were half through the number, I heard a double snap, and began to experience an uneasy feeling just below either knee. The bands which held my symmetricals had broken and they began to twist and slide downwards in a most horrifying manner.

The further they slid the more grotesquely they bulged.

Faced Ridicule

Several of the other girls noticed my plight and began to titter. The audience, scenting something wrong, made a closer inspection and began to roar with laughter over my predicament. Finally, Broncho Billy ordered down the curtain and I was dragged off the stage.

I fled behind one of the wings and collapsed. Rose La France had been a miserable flop. Opportunity had knocked at her door and ill luck had queered her. Perhaps she never would have another chance.

The stage manager was seeking me. "Where is that —— little fool?" he inquired. "I'm going to murder her. I'll kill her in cold blood!"

I shrank even further into my huddle and a moment later, just when I was preparing to flee for my life, up came Zoe Barnett—God bless her—and knelt down beside me, putting her arms around my quaking shoulders and comforting me.

"Never mind, dear," she said. "You didn't know any better. Cheer up. My heavens! Just listen to that audience! They're simply going wild over you. They think you did it on purpose; that it was a part of your act."

I listened. The house was in an uproar. Hastily, Zoe wiped away my tears and thrust me into the arms of Broncho Billy.

"Make a bow for them, you clumsy little idiot," he commanded. "Make a bow, smile, and then get back here quick. That is, if you can without breaking your—clumsy neck!"

Four times I had to step out alone before that hysterically laughing audience. And four times they clapped their appreciation.

Rose La France had stopped the show!

When the final curtain fell, I didn't know whether I was going to be fired, or not. Broncho Billy and one of the stage managers took turns in bawling me out. With my powdered cheeks streaked with tears, I stood and accepted the abuse without protest.

And then, their tempers worn out, they assuaged my grief by giving me a speaking part, which I was to assume at the next performance. A real speaking part!

Speaking Part

I was transported into a realm of empyrean bliss. I was in heaven. Riding on a silvery cloud hitched to a comet.

My "lines" were these:

"I'll have chocolate!"

I studied that night as I never had studied before. "I'll have chocolate. I'll have chocolate." Over and over again I repeated the magic formula. I tried various tones of voice. I recited them in the eight keys of the scale.

I gazed admiringly at myself in the mirror, watching the movements of my lips and affecting the mannerisms which I thought would befit a prima donna. And again I didn't sleep a wink.

When I would doze off, I would wake myself up with the mystic sentence: "I'll have chocolate!" Even to this day I get a thrill when I hear those words.

Two weeks I recited them nightly before the audience, my audience. Rose La France's audience. For two whole weeks we played here in that shabby little theater on Fillmore street, near my home.

Then we went on the road.

Never shall I forget the thrilling sadness of my parting with my father and mother for the first time. And, they, too, took the departure of their "baby" much to heart.

My sister had married some three years before and was living in Fresno with her husband. While there was never any difference in the extent of my parents' love, they had always favored me because I was the "baby," a fact which Hazel deeply resented at times.

"Baby" was their pet name for me. Seldom did they call me anything else. And so, when the time come for me to step out from under the parental roof, they took it doubly hard.

Father's Advice

"Baby," my father, propped up on pillows in bed, adjured in trembling tones. "Always be a good girl. No matter what happens, always be a good girl. Money and fame doesn't count. It is only here—" and he thumped his chest, "that anything matters. In the heart.

"Pick good company, Baby. If you can't make good friends, don't make any at all. Bad friends are like bad apples. They spoil all the others in the barrel."

From time to time various of the male element tried to break down the barriers of my reserve. They would engage me in conversation and then gradually lead up. And invariably, they would try to maul me, something that I never was able to stand.

On almost every occasion, our tete-a-tete would wind up by my slapping their faces, after which I would turn around and flee to my room, where I would sob out my heart for the rest of the day or night.

So it went on for more than three weeks, until we reached Fresno, where my sister, Hazel and her husband, lived.

There, one of the road managers, whom I shall call "Tony," made a last frantic bid for my favors and so nearly accomplished his purpose that even now I quiver with fright when I try to recall the incident.

Her lithe beauty was a constant source of peril to Alma Rubens in her early struggles on the stage. In the next chapter of her own story, she tells of her experience with the vampire stage manager, which changed the course of her life.

Three children were fatherless today because of the fatal wounding of John Rusko, 36, of 453 Duss avenue, Ambridge, late yesterday. Rusko died while en route to the Sewickley Valley Hospital. Mrs. Rusko told police she and her husband were in the kitchen of their home when Rusko reached for a .32 caliber revolver from a shelf. The gun was discharged and he fell to the floor with a bullet wound in his heart.

BRICK MAKERS END SESSIONS

The twenty-fifth annual convention of the National Paving Brick Manufacturers' Association was brought to a close with discussions of brick boulevard construction last night in the William Penn Hotel. George Hockensmith, superintendent for Booth and Flinn, contractors, gave an illustrated talk on the construction of the Ohio River boulevard, paved with brick for five miles.

Frank B. Dunn, of Connellsville, O., president of the association, said he had been told by many manufacturers and visitors that the convention just closed had been one of the most successful ever held. Officers of the association will be elected later in the year by a national governing board.

Ashes of Woman To Be Strewn Along Creek

BELLEFONTE, Pa., Feb. 7.—Mrs. Esther Mabel Tressel, wife of Justice of the Peace J. L. Tressel, before she died in the Centre County Hospital Tuesday, dictated arrangements for her funeral, directing that her body be cremated and the ashes scattered to the winds along the banks of Spring Creek, where she spent her girlhood days. The body was sent to Pittsburgh for cremation. The ashes will be brought here within a few days and her wishes carried out, according to the family.

CORONER OPENS DEATH INQUIRY

How Willet S. Dryden, 67, of 4722 East Carson street extension, suffered a fractured skull which caused his death last night in St. Joseph's Hospital was being investigated by the coroner's office and homicide squad today.

Three boys found Dryden lying in River road, near Becks Run road, January 17. They hailed a motorist who took the victim to the hospital. Police and relatives were unable to learn from the man how he had been injured.

Harry R. Dryden, of 2055 Sarah street, a brother, who claimed the body at the morgue last night, suspected foul play. Dryden was inclined to the belief that his brother was attacked by a man. Morgue attaches declared the man might have been a victim of a hit-and-run driver.

INDICT ACCUSER OF SLEUTHS

The detectives, James Noon and Robert Burke, appeared before the grand jury and testified against Cinquegrani. They arrested him in Squirrel Hill several weeks ago.

Cinquegrani, following a hearing before Magistrate Charles Papale in East End Police Court, was released on $2,500 bail, pending a court trial. Charges that Burke and Noon hired Cinquegrani to "write numbers" for them are being probed by police heads.

"Public Improvements Promote Progress"

The Road Maintenance Division resurfaced with asphaltic concrete a total of 460,868 square yards of roadway surfaces, which is equivalent to 49.81 miles of roadway 10 feet wide. In addition to this asphaltic resurfacing, 103 miles of county roads were given the tar-chip treatment, which consists of filling all surface cracks with hot liquid tar, then spreading over same fine stone or chips, and finally compacting the surface-protecting layer with a steam roller. By this inexpensive process, water is kept away from the road's foundation and several years of additional wearage is gained before it becomes necessary to completely resurface with asphaltic concrete. During the year 57,630 lineal fee. of safety barriers were placed at dangerous places along the county highways. Dirt roads to the extent of 36.78 miles were surfaced with red dog, slag and cinders and the drainage and general traffic conditions improved.

REPORTS SHOW DEPRESSION CHECKED

Indicators Now Available Reveal Advances to Be More Than Psychological

By MERRYL S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—It now becomes feasible to test the improvement in business sentiment since the turn of the year with actual statistics of trade volume.

Basic indicators now available tend to show that the gains have been more than psychological.

In December and January, the least that can be said is that the rate of the descent of general business was arrested.

DEPRESSION CHECKED

Until we are further away from the period and are able to view it in better perspective, it will not be feasible to pass final scientific judgment on the assertion by James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation, that the bottom of the depression has been passed. An unbiased reading of the tangible statistics at least warrants the assertion that the slump in the total volume of American business, adjusted to seasonal variations, has been checked.

Mr. Rukeyser

Whether this is merely a halt, to be followed by another decline, or the definite turn in the business cycle, of course remains to be seen, but, if the end of the domestic depression is not near, this slump will have lasted longer than any comparable setback in the annals of American business.

The depression of 1873 was not over until 1878, but the natural impulses toward improvement in 1875 were checked by Congress' deflationary edict for the resumption of specie payment on January 1, 1879. The '73 to '78 cycle therefore is hardly comparable.

STATISTICAL STRAWS

What are the favorable statistical straws?

One of the key barometers consists of individual bank debits in cities outside of New York. In December, this index declined slightly, after months of severe declines. In January, the movement was horizontal for the month as a whole, but showed an upward trend in the second half. This index was better than in January, 1930.

CHICAGO, Feb. 7. — Profit of Bendix Aviation Corporation for the first 60 days of 1931 probably will be in excess of dividend requirements for the first quarter, three months ago, the company paid a dividend of 25 cents a share.

Schedules for February shipment are in excess of those for January, and indications are March shipments will be well ahead of February's.

BUSINESS INDEX SAGS AGAIN

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—During the last half of January the slight improvement evident in American trade after the turn of the year petered out. The business index has been sagging for three weeks, and as the month closed it was slightly under the December low, at 76.8 per cent of normal, by preliminary figures, against 78.7 in the previous week and 94.1 per cent in the corresponding week last year, says the Business Week in its report covering the week ended today.

The January level averaged about the same as November, but a little above December. January's upturn in pig-iron output—first since last April, may be another sign that the low point was passed in December. But the recent slackening of the rate of improvement in steel, coal and power production, building, carloadings and check payments suggests how irregular, feeble and protracted recovery is likely to be when it is left merely to the "invisible hand" and like "natural" forces within business itself, without the support and stimulation of external factors brought to bear by intelligent, courageous and cooperative banking policies.

Moreover, the steady downward drift of commodity price levels, the widening circle of debt repudiations or moratoria, the increasing political chaos and conflict precipitated by group resistance to deflation, show that the mere postponement of recovery is not the worst danger in the blind acceptance of this process. Sooner or later it must be checked by deliberate effort.

Machinery Exports Decline in Value

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7. — Exports of industrial machinery from the United States in 1930 were valued at $227,060,000 against $257,085,000 in 1929. However exports show a gain over 1928, when they were $209,450,000 and exceed all other previous years back to 1921, the Department of Commerce reports.

General growing trend of foreign calls for American construction equipment has featured the five-year period of 1926 to 1930, inclusive. The heaviest demand came from Latin-America, which, the department stated, is significant as indicating that despite political unrest road construction activities have not been disrupted.

Fabricated Steel Plate Orders Off

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7. — Orders for fabricated steel plate during 1930 totaled 386,519 tons, against 513,065 tons in 1929, according to Department of Commerce. December orders totaled 20,549 tons, against 26,137 tons in November and 23,535 tons in December, 1929.

Business Trend Still In Uncertain State

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

THE SEASONAL EXPANSION in business activity, which started early in January, appears to have halted. Little change in the pace of either production or distribution has been apparent during the past week. Since the beginning of the year business has been marking time and has failed to give a positive indication of a trend in any direction.

Improvement in business over the almost complete suspension at the close of 1930 was generally expected during January. A test of the future prospects was watched for, not in the mere fact of a gain, but in its extent and duration.

So far activity seems to have been in less than normal seasonal proportions. The break in the upward trend during the past week indicates that, while the bottom of the depression may have been passed, more time may be needed for business to lay the foundation for a recovery.

Steel Below 50 Per Cent

STEEL PRODUCTION HAS not passed the 50 per cent mark. Some scattered price cutting has developed but this has not become a particularly serious factor. With the first quarter nearly half over, extensive price weakness would be a bad sign since it would indicate possible difficulties in establishing new prices for the second quarter. The advance of $1 a ton in bars, plates and shapes, announced in December, has not yet been tested.

While steel companies have not attempted to cut wages of mill workers, there have been a few instances of downward revisions of salaries in office forces. This step has been taken in recognition of the fact that first quarter earnings of most companies in the industry will be little better than in the fourth quarter of 1930.

Commodities Stable

ONE FAVORABLE BUSINESS indication can be seen in the increased stability of the prices of most commodities. During the final months of 1930 quotations of copper, rubber, wheat, coffee, sugar and other leading products in world commerce were slipping. The major down swing seems to have been checked. The changes in prices which have taken place recently have been in a narrow range.

After such a prolonged slump we could hardly expect the business picture to make a sudden change. Just as the beginnings of the slump in the summer of 1929 were hardly perceptible, the recovery may also be slow in getting under way.

Stock Market Drifts

FOR WEEKS THE stock market has reflected the indefinite state of business. No trend has been perceptible. Trading volume has been small. Quotations are at practically the same levels today as they were a month ago.

In view of the great number of reduced dividends, passed dividends, and unfavorable earnings statements, the behavior of the market may be considered to have been good. It will be difficult to put stocks up until the bulk of the bad news about last year's operations is out and until some bullish indication of business prospects for the future shall have been discovered.

A week ago apprehension over the possible sale of a large issue of government bonds to finance soldiers' bonus payments was a serious disturbing influence to business. Within the last few days these fears have been somewhat allayed since numerous private advices from Washington have indicated that the authorization of a large issue of bonds is unlikely.

SALES TEST IS SUCCESS

General Products Corporation, manufacturer of Quo Shave, has completed a merchandising test in the Pittsburgh area for the purpose of determining public acceptance of its new product. As a result, it has placed Quo Shave with approximately 95 per cent of the local drug trade, including all drug chains and department stores.

The latest development in the product is the new patented two-compartment jar permitting both creams in one jar without destroying the individual chemical properties. When emptied, the jar may be used as an ash tray.

Until recently, all General Products activities have been centered in the Pittsburgh district. In the past few weeks operations have been extended to Ohio. The Marshall Drug Company, a chain of 48 stores, is now featuring Quo Shave in Cleveland.

For the immediate future, the sales efforts will be concentrated in Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio. A budget is now being compiled for nation-wide distribution.

In keeping with this expansion program, General Products Corporation has taken larger quarters in the Plaza Building.

Committee Favors Capper Oil Bill

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7. — Senate Commerce Committee voted to report favorably the Capper bill to restrict the importation of crude and refined oil to 16,000,000 barrels a year for 1931, 1932 and 1933. The vote of the committee was nine to six. The committee took no action on the Shortridge bill to place a tariff of $1 a barrel on oil.

EXCHANGE LOAN RATIO DOWN

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Total borrowings by members of the New York Stock Exchange against stock collateral on February 1 amounted to 3.30 per cent of market value of all shares listed on the exchange on that date, compared with 3.86 per cent on January 1, a decrease of 0.56 per cent. On February 1, 1930, this ratio stood at 5.77 per cent. Market values of all shares listed on the New York Stock Exchange on February 1 amounted to $52,061,956,709, against $49,019,878,459 on January 1. During January, borrowings of members decreased $173,267,512 to $1,720,345,318 at the end of the month.

As of February 1, there were 1,303 stock issues, aggregating 1,298,707,031 shares, listed on the Stock Exchange, against 1,308 issues and 1,296,794,480 shares on January 1. Average market value of all listed shares was $40.09 on February 1, compared with $37.80 on January 1.

WINDOW GLASS ORDERS UP

Orders received by the manufacturers of window glass were in some better volume this week, although not sufficient either in number or size to indicate any very general replenishment of stocks by the distributing trade, according to American Glass Review. Marketing conditions in this branch continue rather unsatisfactory, and leading factors are hopeful for an early improvement in this respect.

Operations at the window glass factories held at substantially unchanged levels during the week, and production of this commodity is understood to be somewhat less than the current demand.

Demand for plate glass is showing a gradual increase, and during the remainder of the month should continue to improve. Production of this year's new models is now getting under way in earnest at the automobile factories and a corresponding stimulus in consumption of plate glass is in order. While new business placed so far this year by the mirror industry has been well below normal, the indications are favorable for an early increase in demand from this source. Orders from the jobbing trade are largely for fill-ins, with little buying for future needs in evidence.

Hudson Bay Mining Output Now Steady

WINNIPEG, Feb. 7.—All initial difficulties incidental to the opening up of Hudson Bay Mining & Smelting Company's plant at Flin Flon have been removed. Production is now on a steady basis with shipments of blister copper and electrolytic zinc that have averaged recently around 50 tons of copper a day and 40 tons of zinc.

Practically 3,000 tons of ore is being milled, about 2,000 of which is coming from the open pit, which will continue to remain the principal source of ore until a depth of 300 feet is reached. Copper shipments are going to Canadian refineries at Montreal, and the zinc is being sent to various European and British ports through New York. There has been no difficulty in regard to open pit operations during cold spells.

GAIN IN STEEL FAR FROM LARGE

Producers Convinced That Improvement in Basic Conditions Is Needed

By B. E. V. LUTY.

Having experienced seasonal improvement in steel demand since the first of the year, steel makers are convinced that what they need is a substantial improvement in general underlying conditions both industrial and financial. In point of percentage the increase in steel demand has been fully in line with precedent but the basis, the December rate of shipping steel, was a low one and the additional tonnage furnished by the percentage is far from large.

It is of course an important point that steel demand is no longer influenced by the receding movement in general trade. According to the steel showing, that recession ended in December, for otherwise steel demand would have had little or no seasonal increase and might indeed have decreased. In every month of last year after February, steel demand was reflecting the progress of business recession. That things are not getting worrse but are instead showing seasonal improvement is some comfort, but a great deal more is needed.

INGOT OUTPUT

Steel ingot production in December was not a close measure of finished steel shipments during the month, as there was liquidation of stocks of ingots and semi-finished. There may have been more than 15 per cent increase in steel ingot production from December to January, but the increase in shipments of finished steel products was hardly more than 10 per cent, which has been about the usual seasonal increase when general underlying conditions were not changing.

It has been common talk in the last couple weeks that the steel trade is disappointed. Such talk may be misleading if the disappointment is not analyzed. No large increase in steel demand had been predicted or expected, although there may have been various hopes. There could hardly be disappointment over general business not improving, since the ending of recession ought to be enough good news for a few weeks at least. Steel demand had sunk to such a low level by December that there was some reason for expecting not merely the seasonal increase that has occurred but a sort of rebound, produced in part by stocks all down the line having been liquidated so rigidly against January 1 inventories.

FINANCING HARD

There is further ground for disappointment in the fact that it is proving so difficult to finance new projects involving the use of steel, at a time when interest rates are very low indeed and money is said to be plentiful. A conspicuous case is pipe lines. Gasoline lines have an assured earning power for the gasoline is already moving, by rail, and with many projects it can readily be proved that piping would cost only a fraction as much, with a conservatively short period for amortization. Natural gas lines are not altogether so clear for the market has to be made, but with many projects the market is a very promising one. In all probability not a few pipe lines will be laid this year, but there may not be as much as last year.

The large volume of fabricated structural steel jobs let up to last September, and the fair volume of lettings since then, might suggest that some financing is not difficult, but the fact is that there has not been much financing involved. Most of the large jobs are of a public character, while an unusual proportion of the total tonnage let is in small jobs. The distribution into different classes of construction is quite different from that of two years or three years ago.

Republic Steel Co. Reports 1930 Loss

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Feb. 7. — The Republic Steel Corporation formed early last year by the merger of several steel companies had a net loss of $3,522,003.20, for 1930, the company announced. The loss is equivalent to $1.74 a share on the 1,989,212 shares of common stock outstanding.

The announcement said that the figures included operation of constituent and subsidiary companies for the first three months of 1930 so that it embraces a full year's operations of all units in Republic.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

Cheap Money Rates for N. Y. Brokers Only

By B. C. FORBES

Mr Forbes

THOMAS J. WATSON, president of the International Business Machines Corporation, which enjoyed record-breaking business last year, made this heartening observation to 500 of his sales force:

"It would have been impossible for us to have made the record we made last year had it not been for the fact that a great many other businesses were very prosperous. We sometimes overlook those things. We hear so much about unemployment, about four million men being unemployed, that we lose sight of the fact that there are more than forty-three million people gainfully employed and furnishing buying power to keep the wheels turning."

A LOT of people are puzzled when they see money quoted in Wall Street at 1½ or 2 per cent, and then find, when they go to a bank to borrow, that they must pay three or four times these rates. There is a reason for this, as for everything else in the world.

A Chicago reader, having written complaining bitterly—and sarcastically—over an experience of this kind, I sent his letter to the largest bank there, the Continental Illinois Bank, and the reply explains things briefly but lucidly:

"These published money rates in Wall Street apply to New York brokers' loans for large amounts collateralled by prime, readily marketable securities. Individual borrowers 'over the counter,' even in New York, pay higher rates than brokers' loans command, especially as the latter are strictly payable at maturity or on demand, and the lender is under no obligation to extend a renewal.

"Further, the quotations should not be construed as applicable to money markets outside of New York. Our local brokers in the Chicago market are paying 4 to 4½ per cent for local accommodation, while rates to individual borrowers range from 4½ to 6 per cent, depending on the size of the loan, the value of the borrower's account and the marketability of the collateral.

"We think you will agree that, considering the bank's operating expenses, it would obviously not be profitable to lend any considerable amount of funds at 2½ per cent or less; in fact, you will find that, as a rule, funds loaned at these rates represent temporary excess deposits in the hands of the lending bankers."

FINANCIAL HOPES are rising that an extra session of Congress will be avoided. If it is, other things stand a good chance of rising.

ERNEST SUFFERN, head of the General Industrial Foundation, New York, is convinced that everybody in the big city is not dishonest—although, true, New York has been giving people throughout the country too much reason for thinking otherwise, what with its exposed dishonesty among magistrates, politicians, police, and, now, bank executives and directors.

Mr. Suffern was stunned to discover the other evening that he had left a bag containing valuable and irreplaceable papers in a taxi. He had taken no notice of the number or of the driver's name—or even of the name of the company owning the taxi.

Before he had time to set in motion any machinery to locate his loss, he was apprised by the National Transportation Company that one of its drivers, Irving Blasenstein, had turned in the precious bag.

NEW YORK's largest hotel, the New Yorker, made a 5½ per cent profit on its entire investment in its first year of operation—and attributes this wonderful achievement mainly to the fact that it was the largest advertiser ($500,000) among all the city's hotels.

Talking of advertising, W. J. Daily, sales promotion manager, states that $6,500,000 will be used for advertising and other sales promotion of General Electric's refrigerator this year, an increase of half a million over 1930.

GEORGE I. COCHRAN told stockholders of the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company of California, at the annual meeting this week, that the company did more business and made more money last year than ever before. He said:

"We are looking forward to making still greater progress this year."

The dividend was increased—and Mr. Cochran hints that other increases should follow because of the company's waxing prosperity.

PRESIDENT HARRY E. WARD of the Irving Trust Company, one of New York's mammoth financial institutions, commenting on Dr. Daniel Starch's compilation showing a 74 per cent increase in stockholders of large American enterprises, which was summarized in this column a few days ago, says in a personal note:

"What strikes me as the most important point in the article is the expression that 'it is an age of great business enterprises owned by the people.' That's good. We hear altogether too much nowadays about 'great business enterprises,' but the 'owned by the people' feature has not been given anything like its proper place in the picture. I am afraid that the dear old octopus idea is still strong in the public mind, and it is most unfortunate.

"The stockholder figures presented show a tendency toward people ownership which, if it keeps up, might well solve the octopus problem in a comparatively few years."

HOMES BUILT FROM PRIZE DRAWINGS

A number of dwellings in Virginia Manor, new real estate development in Mt. Lebanon, were constructed from plans which won prizes in the national architectural competition. Many people, interested or acquainted with the artists' drawings, daily view the buildings in order to see the transformation of the plans into places of actual habitation.

Every home in Virginia Manor was designed by an artist on the theory that a building so constructed costs no more than a matter of fact stock plan. Prices for homes and properties in the plan range from $16,000 to $50,000.

MAIN ARTERIES

Virginia Manor is situated on the level ridge parallel to and a half mile west of Washington road and commands a view of the whole southwest portion of the county. Half a mile west of Washington road, half a mile east of Greentree pike, through both of which it is accessible, it is also at the head of Banksville road.

With the completion of the proposed Ferry street bridge and tunnel, Virginia Manor will be situated at the head of three main traffic highways to the South Hills.

BRITISH TRADE CIRCLES GLUM

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—The usual first of the year optimism in British trade circles is lacking, but unemployment shows no further increase. Industries in Norway are slow and unemployment is somewhat greater than a year ago. Unemployment continues to rise in Italy, in spite of some increase of optimism in commercial circles. In Austria and Hungary, economic depression continues to prevail without visible prospect of improvement. Despite improvement in a few industries, Canadian trade, as a whole is quiet.

Caution still characterizes Japanese business and continued restriction of cotton yarn production is anticipated. No improvement has occurred in China. Some uneasiness is expressed in Singapore over approaching Chinese New Year settlements, and several dealer failures have occurred.

Conditions are slightly better in Argentina, owing to stable exchange and good weather. No recovery from dull conditions is indicated in Brazil. Trade circles have become more optimistic in Panama. A reduction in Mexican budget expenditures for 1931 has been announced.

MINE INSTALLS COAL WASHER

A new coal washing plant, with a capacity of 10,000 tons of coal daily, has been installed in the Coverdale No. 8 mine of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation, officials announced. Installation of this machine marks the introduction of the cleaning method into the soft coal industry, although it has been in use in the anthracite regions 10 years.

The washer takes the place of the shaker-screen method of cleaning coal, and reduces ash content in coal from 5 to 10 per cent. Work of installing the washer was begun last September.

Mrs. Mary Duke Biddle, of New York, daughter of Benjamin Duke, has purchased the estate and donated it to the university.

SCHOOLS GAIN STUDENTS

In these days of uncertain business conditions an increasing number of America's youth is turning to higher education. This attitude is especially noticeable in the tristate district, where every school of advanced standing is reporting gains in students. The various institutions are facing a new problem—that of restricted facilities to handle the increasing demand for education.

Some of the schools have long been prepared for such times, notably Pittsburgh School of Accountancy which, with its faculty of approximately 35 certified public accountants and members of the Pennsylvania Bar, as well as its classrooms, which comprise the entire fifth floor of the Law and Finance Building, is especially well fitted for the unexcelled instruction in accountancy and law which it provides in both the evening school and day school divisions.

January Corporate Financing Higher

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Corporate stock and bond financing in January totaled $629,800,000, against $141,800,000 in December, $764,300,000 in January, 1930, and $1,218,800,000 in January, 1929, a compilation by Standard Statistics Company shows. The trend toward issuance of bonds instead of stocks is still pronounced, bonds accounting for $545,100,000 of the $629,800,000 total last month, the survey shows.

Real Estate

The Porter and MacDowell Company, downtown brokers, have leased the three-story brick building at 310 Diamond street, for the Fidelity Trust Company, to the Chapin Restaurant Company, of Cleveland, O. The building is now being completely remodeled and will be used as a restaurant which is scheduled to open about May 1. According to the brokers the lease is to run for 10 years, and was acquired for approximately $125,000. The building is on a lot 20x73 feet.

Ralph J. Watkins, director of the Bureau of Business Research of the University of Pittsburgh, will address members of the Building Owners and Manager Association at the association luncheon meeting to be held Wednesday. The work being done by the bureau is part of an eight-year program in regional economic research.

A two and a half-story brick home at 35 Crescent drive, Beverly Heights, has been purchased by A. N. Young from E. Wilcox through the offices of the Colonial Realty Company of Pittsburgh, Inc., South Hills brokers. Wilcox has taken as part payment a vacant property in Library road, Bethel Township. The same realtors have sold for the Scott-Jones Mortgage Company to J. P. Flick a two-story dwelling at 730 Parkside avenue, Mt. Lebanon, for $8,500.

The Trilli & Dunbar Company, builders, have deeded to John E. Douglas a new brick six-room home on lot 30x120 feet with cement block garage at 1209 Woodbourne avenue, Brookline. Smith & Mott, brokers, made the sale. The same brokers have sold for Peter Webb to Robert C. O'Brien the business, stock and fixtures of a confectionery store at 926 Brookline boulevard.

Second Ward—Otto Milk Company, creamery, 2416 Smallman street, $10,000.

LARGE VOLUME OF MACHINE TRADE IN SIGHT

By J. H. VAN DEVENTER

The largest volume of business that the machine tool industry has yet handled, with the possible exception of the World War period, is in sight, according to authorities on the subject. The replacement market alone is estimated at amounting to at least $400,000,000 during the next five years.

This huge volume of business is expected because of the firm conviction of metal working executives that the days of easy profits are over for some time to come; that the general level of prices will decline for several years and that as a result, competition in manufacturing will be keener than ever before. This means that new and better tools are demanded.

The machine tool industry has always been alert to changes in industry, because it has had to anticipate them. It has utilized the recent dull period in designing new equipment and improving the design and efficiency of the old. The number of new and improved machine tools that has been announced in the past few months by tool builders, surpasses all records for a similar period. It would be difficult to find a builder who has not made some substantial improvement in his product.

This means that, from the production efficiency and profit making standpoint many if not most of the machine tools which were purchased and installed prior to these improvements, are now obsolete. For, other things being equal, the manufacturer who replaces his present equipment with these improved machines will be able to undersell his competitor who attempts to get along with the older models.

This missionary work of the machine tool builders has fallen on fertile ground, judging by the interest exhibited by their prospective customers in the new products and in the volume of inquiries. There is a receptiveness now that is quite different from the attitude of a year ago. Undoubtedly it means business. Competition is the one thing that is never postponed.

Banker Surveys Probate Records

That Pittsburgh knows the value of trust service is revealed by a recent survey of the probate records for 1930, representing 12 of the largest cities in the United States, in which the best showing was made by Pittsburgh, where 65 out of every 100 property owners who died during 1930 left wills, which was the highest average of any of the 12 cities, according to G. A. Price, vice president and trust officer of the Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company.

Man Found Dead Of Fumes in Room

Alexander Ross, 60, of 1322 Woods Run avenue, was found dead in the front room of his home last night, a victim of carbon monoxide, according to the coroner's report. A neighbor who had not seen the victim for three days summoned police who broke into the house and found the victim sitting in a chair. A small stove was burning in the room, deputy coroners said.

Surplus Freight Cars Take Decline

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Class I railroads on January 23 had 650,003 freight cars in good repair and immediately available for service, the car service division of the American Railway Association announced. This was a decrease of 23,036 cars compared with January 15, at which time there were 673,039 surplus freight cars.

Surplus coal cars on January 23 totaled 230,797, a decrease of 8,170 within a week, while surplus box cars totaled 348,755, a decrease of 13,958 cars for the same period.

SHIP TONNAGE HIGH IN 1930

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Merchant vessels launched throughout the world in 1930 represented a larger volume of tonnage than for any year since 1921, when the shipbuilding boom began during the war reached its highest point, according to the transportation division, Department of Commerce. Launchings during 1930 totaled 2,889,000 gross tons, as compared with 2,793,000 gross in 1929, a gain of 96,000 gross tons.

During 1930, for the first time in the history of world shipbuilding, the tonnage of the motor ships launched was in excess of that for all other types of vessels combined.

Another feature of the 1930 returns is the increase in the output of the shipyards of the United States. Their launchings were almost double their total for 1929. As a result, this country, which ranked fifth in volume of output in 1929, now is second only to Great Britain and Ireland. As against the American gain of 120,000 gross tons for last year, a decline of 44,000 gross tons was reported for Great Britain and Ireland, while for all other countries combined there was a gain of about 20,000 tons.

BRIGADE MARKS 37TH YEAR

District Attorney Andrew T. Park addressed members of the Swift Mission Brigade at the celebration of the brigade's thirty-seventh anniversary in the First Presbyterian Church, North Side, last night. The district attorney is a former member of the brigade.

Park declared that organizations such as the Boy Scouts and Swift Mission Brigade had much to do in forming the character of young men. He said that with thousands of cases passing through Juvenile Court each year, he has been informed that no member of the Boy Scouts has ever been in trouble there, and as far as he knew no member of the brigade has ever been a defendant in Criminal Court.

Maj. E. Morgan McComb, founder and commander of the brigade, was given a basket of flowers by John W. Cunningham, superintendent of the church Sabbath School, in behalf of the church session and Bible school. The Rev. Edward Daum and other former and present members of the organization exchanged reminiscences. Refreshments were served by the women of the church. The Swift Mission Brigade won the military prize at the St. Louis Exposition.

MODERATE GAIN IN LOCAL TRADE

Grocery and Provision Prices Off Slightly; Hardware Sales Low

While business continues slow there is apparently a slight trend upward and conditions appear to be improving in a moderate way, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. While the results for January were somewhat disappointing, and some lines of business report no particular improvement, others report buying in somewhat larger volume, and it is the general opinion that inventories average materially lower than they have for a number of years. Jobbers of dry goods, wearing apparel and shoes report buying of spring merchandise comparatively light as yet, although a gradual improvement is being noted.

February furniture sales are in progress, but the volume of business is still comparatively light. Hardware sales are slow, while paint is moving more freely, and there appears to be a fairly good demand for wallpaper. Groceries and provisions are in fair demand, but prices are somewhat lower. Demand for lumber and other building materials continues quiet.

OIL OUTPUT DROPS

Electrical equipment continues to move at a moderate rate and demand for radio equipment continues materially lower than a year ago. The demand for sanitary and heating equipment is quiter than usual for this season of the year.

Production of crude oil has shown a slight reduction and now appears to be slightly lower than the rate of consumption, stocks on hand being reported slightly lower than a year ago. Demand for bituminous coal continues quiet and rate of production still about 15 per cent lower than a year ago.

BANK DEBITS TAKE DROP

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—For the week ended January 31, 1931, bank debits showed declines from the preceding week and the corresponding period in 1930. Total loans and discounts of Federal reserve member banks declined slightly from the week previous and were also under figures for the same week last year. Interest rates for time money and also call money showed no change from the week previous. Both rates, however, were materially under the same week in 1930.

Wholesale prices, as measured by the composite index, showed a fractional decline from the preceding week, reaching the lowest point in the present decline. The prices of agricultural products declined, but the non-agricultural price level was the same as reported for the week previous. Both were materially under last year. The price of wheat at Kansas City declined, slightly, as did cotton middling at New York. The iron and steel composite price remained at the same level as for the past two weeks, but was under the figure reported for the same week in 1930.

Shanghai Silver Stocks Decrease

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Silver stocks in Shanghai on January 29 totaled 199,300,000 taels, of which 127,000,00 taels were held in native banks, says a radiogram to the Department of Commerce from its Shanghai office. The corresponding figures for January 22 were 203,000,000 taels and 128,000,000 taels, respectively.

Sycee and silver bars were valued at 94,000,000 taels on January 29, as compared with 96,000,000 taels on January 22. The total number of silver dollars in Shanghai on January 29 was 147,000,000, as compared with 148,200,000 on January 22.

UNION CARBIDE NET NEAR $3 A SHARE

Fourth Quarter Earnings Reduced by Let-down in Steel and Motor Trades

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—The Union Carbide & Carbon Corporation probably will report a net profit of more than 80 cents a share in the last quarter and between $3 and $3.15 a share for its 9,000,743 shares of capital stock for the year 1930. That would compare with a 1929 net of $35,427,024, equal to $4.19 a share on 8,486,723 average shares of stock, and to $3.93 a share based on the larger amount of stock now outstanding.

In the first nine months of 1930 net profit was $19,988,264, equal to $2.22 a share on 9,000,743 shares against $24,050,664 or $2.88 a share on 8,313,818 shares for the corresponding 1929 period. The last quarter of the year normally is the most profitable period for Union Carbide. Thus, in 1929, not in the last quarter was $11,376,360 equal to $1.27 a share on 8,981,861 shares, and in 1928, $10,947,900 equal to $1.22 a share.

SPLIT-UP IN 1929

The stock was split three-for-one in 1929.

In view of general business curtailment in the final quarter of last year, however, it is unlikely that Carbide will show profits for that period very much in excess of net earned in the third quarter. Shutdowns in the steel and motor industries undoubtedly reduced the demand for ferro-alloys, chrome and vanadium and other products of the electro-metallurgical division. The business of the oxy-acetylene welding division and other important divisions obviously were adversely affected by general industrial conditions.

PRESTONE SALES GAIN

Sales of Prestone, the synthetic glycerine being marketed by Carbide as an anti-freeze mixture for automobile radiators, have been showing a steady growth and it is probable that increased income from that source was a factor in the last quarter. Trade estimates place Carbide's sales of this product for the current winter at more than 4,000,000 gallons, which is sufficient to increase income materially.

Sees Transoceanic Airship Line By 1934

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—P. W. Litchfield, president of the Goodyear Zeppelin Corporation, told the Senate Commerce Committee that if the McNary-Parker bill is passed a transoceanic airship line between the United States and Europe will operate on a regular schedule by 1934. The McNary-Parker bill, which is before both the House and Senate, provides for the awarding of mail contracts to the airships as soon as they begin active transoceanic operations.

General Electric Has Good Prospects in New Fields.

Many believe that the General Electric Company has good prospects in the new fields it is entering. The company is offering washing machines and home laundry electrical apparatus on a liberal partial payment plan. The consistent diversification of the company's activities has been one of the attractive features of the General Electric organization. With so many lines to draw business from, the company is in a good position to show immediate benefits when general conditions improve.

Considerable talk has been heard to the effect that long positions in Montgomery Ward should be avoided until more definite information is available on the future purchasing power of the farmer. However, some interests still are optimistic on the long range outlook. They point out that the current year has begun favorably, with sales in January down only 9.3 per cent, which is less than the lower prices for merchandise would cause.

Quiet scale buying has been noted in Warren Brothers at times recently, because at existing levels the stock yields around 8 per cent on the current dividend of $3 a share per annum. It has been estimated that earnings for 1930 were not far from the $6.05 a share reported in 1929. The outlook for Warren Brothers is considered satisfactory. With heavy expenditures authorized by various states, cities, counties, etc., throughout the country for road work, and with indications that a good volume of business will be forthcoming from foreign countries, the results for the current year probably will be favorable again.

Reports filtering through from Washington suggest rather definitely that several men high in administration circles are satisfied from the evidence they have at hand that the bottom of the depression has been reached and passed and that business is definitely on the mend. Belief prevails that there is a strong disposition in such quarters to get the evidence of this nature before the public, but that for certain reasons there is some hesitation in so doing. Evidently such hesitation is the result of the administration to be possibly a mite premature as happened last November. Perhaps after all, however, things would work out better if the noted improvement is permitted to manifest itself through the medium of the recognized trade barometers rather than through the medium of anything in the way of reassuring statement from high quarters.

The bear element which, after a month of hibernation, took its first real fling at the market Thursday, led by one of the most active of the group of operators that had adhered to the side of the decline through the past year or more, appeared yesterday to have capitulated temporarily. At any rate there was no apparent effort on the part of that group toward extending the moderate decline precipitated by their selling on Thursday. Certainly such an attempt would hardly have found much encouragement in the action of the market during the first half hour. The turnover in that period, barely approximated the 100,000 share total, indicating most impressively the failure of Thursday's decline to have brought in any appreciable amount of liquidation. Wall street was wondering if, after all, Thursday's driving tactics against steel and several other representative stocks had not been primarily for the purpose of facilitating covering in other sections of the list.

The stock market appears to have reached a stage which might be likened to that which prevails when an "irresistible force meets an immovable body." In other words a situation has arisen wherein neither side of opposing speculative forces seems able to negotiate much progress. The market apparently has settled into a trading "rut" pending developments from the outside of sufficient importance to shake it out of the narrow trading range that has marked fluctuations for a fortnight. Thursday's concentrated bear attacks were not characterized by much success and except in the case of a few isolated specialties, operations of constructive forces thus far have been unable to push the market through the top of its trading range.

Board of Trade Handling Rules Changed

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—New rules governing handling of grain in public warehouses whereby operators of such warehouses will practically be required to guarantee condition of grain have been adopted by the Chicago Board of Trade upon a vote of members.

Under the regulations adopted receipts are to be registered with the custodian of the board who will notify holders of receipts in event grain credited thereto deteriorates from acceptable condition. The rules are subject to sanction of the Illinois Commerce Commission.

STOCK TRENDS CONFUSED AT OPENING

P. R. R., Case and U. S. Steel Sag in Initial Sales; Auburn, Nash, Loews Gain

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Price trends were confused at the opening of today's stock market. U. S. Steel and Columbian Carbon sold 1 point lower and Pennsylvania, New York Central, Fox, Electric Autolite, Texas Corporation and Case sagged ¼ to ½. American Power and Light and Auburn on the other hand, rose a point. Union Carbide ¾ and American Telephone, Standard of New Jersey, Chesapeake and Ohio, Loews and Nash gained ¼ to ⅜.

Price trends failed to find a definite direction during the first half hour of the week-end session. United States Steel recovered part of its loss, but Case, du Pont, Procter & Gamble and Air Reduction sold off a point each and Auburn lost its 1-point rise. International Business Machines sold up nearly 2 and United States Industrial Alcohol and Congress Cigar advanced a point.

The week-end trade and business reviews indicated that the seasonal recovery in business had developed some hesitancy, a characteristic which has been notable in the share market. The Annalist said the January statistics, although still incomplete, leave "the observer a little doubtful as to whether the accent from the business depression has definitely begun."

Reports of several projected large municipal bond issues, however, indicated that the investment market was again regarded as satisfactory, and Wall Street was encouraged by the meagre success of bear efforts in the share market.

Sterling cables were steady at $4.85 3-16.

JANUARY INGOT OUTPUT UP

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Production of steel ingots in January showed the first increase since August of 1930, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported today.

The calculated monthly output of all companies last month was 2,483,206 gross tons, an approximate daily output of 91,971 tons for the 27 working days, with operations at 45.94 per cent of rated capacity.

Production for December totaled 2,007,774 tons, an approximate daily output of 77,222 tons for the 26 working days, with operations at 38.57 per cent of capacity.

Last month's production, however, was still considerably lower than for the like month of 1930, when output totaled 3,796,090 tons, a daily average of 140,596 for the 27 working days. Operations during that month were at 70.22 per cent of capacity.

Motor Production Rises in January

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Production of cars and trucks in the United States and Canada during January totaled 183,876 units, as against 161,233 in December and 283,606 in January, 1930, according to the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

World production of Ford Motor Company in January totaled 55,182 cars and trucks, comparing with 45,032 in December and 98,529 in January, 1930.

Mill Reports 1930 Sales at Record

Real Silk Hosiery reports the largest volume of sales in its history for 1930. Declining silk prices, however, reduced profit ratio to sales. The year's net is estimated at between $4 and $5 a share, against $9.29 a share in 1929.

Price Reduced by Copper Exporters

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Copper Exporters, Inc., has reduced the price of copper ¼c a pound to 9.30c c.i.f. Hamburg, Havre and London.

G. C. Murphy Sales Higher for Month

G. C. Murphy Company January sales totaled $1,221,313, an increase of 30 per cent over January, 1930.

PERSHING AGAIN BALKS ALLIED INTRIGUES

MY EXPERIENCES IN WORLD WAR

—By GEN. JOHN J. PERSHING—

Commander-in-Chief, American Forces.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Succeeding chapters of "My Experiences in the World War" will appear daily and Sunday exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

In explanation of our differences with the French over training methods, resulting in an apology from Gen. Petain for criticism he had made to Col. House, I felt it advisable at this time to write Secretary of War Baker. Excerpts of my letter of January 17, 1918, follow:

"When the 1st Division arrived in its training area the French kindly placed a division nearby to aid in instruction. Through association the French officers and soldiers and our own became cordial and the spirit of fraternity has been passed on to succeeding divisions.

Gen. Pershing

"This training alongside the French was limited mainly to the specialties of trench warfare and, under the then division commander, it was left almost wholly to the French.

"Their method was mainly to give demonstrations, that is, they went over and over their trench exercises while our platoons, companies and battalions were usually only observers. They failed to realize that for us at least it was necessary that officers commanding their own units should work out problems for themselves instead of remaining mere imitators.

"Another point of difference was as to tactical value of open warfare.

"We have held that our young officers lacked experience in handling their units in the open, and that a knowledge of the methods of trench warfare was not enough to prepare them for the important duties of commanding units where there was a possibility of open warfare. I have spent much time myself explaining that our company officers must have training in handling and be thoroughly schooled in the principles of what we call 'minor tactics.'

Held Selves Superior

"The French have taken the opposite view and have held that our officers did not need that training now. Notwithstanding that many instances in both British and French experience prove the contrary, the French are very firm in their view.

"They are just a little bit inclined to hold themselves superior in the art of war to both the British and ourselves, and that does not always set very well.

"So finally they criticised us, not only to their war office, but Gen. Petain commented on our methods rather hastily to Mr. House and also to Gen. Bliss. I explained our position to both these gentlemen, adding that I myself had studied, and had required as thorough study as possible by our officers of both French and British methods and experience and had endeavored to select and adopt the best.

"Naturally it would be quite impossible for us to adopt French tactics throughout. That we must retain our basic principles is agreed to by all officers experienced in training our troops. So we have used the French example less, and following more our own ideas of requiring men to think for themselves and learn practically the principles applicable both to open and trench warfare, the French hastily concluded that we were not progressing.

"This was the main cause of the feeling. As M. Clemenceau was very anxious for harmony he rather exaggerated the thing in his own mind. I later explained my view to him, as I did also to Gen. Petain, who saw the force of my position and frankly said so.

Against Amalgamation

"However, in the course of these discussions and correspondence, it developed that the French were really hoping to have our units amalgamated for service with theirs, with the special object in mind of their not being compelled to reduce the number of their divisions.

"This was hidden away under the insistence upon taking over our training.

"Of course we realize that the French are short of men, but, except in a temporary emergency, differences in language and methods would make the combination for actual fighting quite out of the question. In my recent discussions with them I have made that point clear, and they seem to have accepted it, so we had but to settle the question of training.

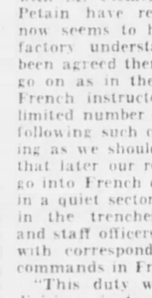
"In the end, my conferences with M. Clemenceau and Gen. Petain have resulted in what now seems to be a very satisfactory understanding. It has been agreed then that we should go on as in the past, aided by French instructors and a more limited number of French units, following such courses of training as we should prescribe, and that later our regiments should go into French divisions, posted in a quiet sector, for experience in the trenches, the generals and staff officers to have service with corresponding grades and commands in French units.

"This duty with the French divisions is to be for training only, and when finished the elements of our divisions are to be reunited under our own officers.

"I think the plan is the very best that we could adopt, and the French seem equally satisfied. A few days ago I had a very cordial telegram from M. Clemenceau expressing his gratification that an agreement had been reached.

Discusses Railroads

"It is to be noted that Gen. Bliss is to be continued on the active list. I presume you have found his visit here made him very valuable. Moreover, I am not so sure that it would be safe to change now anyway. If you should decide to keep him there, as I think possible, then may I again mention Gen. Liggett as a possibility for the Supreme War Council, if he should be available when the time comes?



Gen. Liggett

"He once had the War College and I think would be able to give a good account of himself and render valuable assistance to us. I shall be glad if Gen. March can be allowed to remain here to handle the army artillery.

"Just a word as to the railroad situation: As our forces increase the shortage of freight cars becomes more serious. The French management of railroads are very badly demoralized. They lack men in responsible positions and are very short of operators and laborers. For these reasons we have had trouble getting men and supplies forward, but these conditions are now improving.

"With the Belgian locomotive now being put into shape, and an increase in the number of men to repair cars, we shall be able to keep ahead of transportation requirements. There are thousands of cars in France that are out of repair, and to repair these and put them in shape will not only expedite matters, but will save much tonnage that can be devoted to something else . . .

"According to cables there has been some move made in Washington by the Engineer Corps to put the Engineers back in control of our railroads here. This would be the greatest kind of mistake. We now have experienced railroad men in charge of the Railway Transportation Department, and to my mind it would be next to fatal to give it over to Engineers to run."

Autocratic Methods

The French transportation control was so thoroughly centered in M. Claveille, minister of public works, that he had become autocratic in his methods and in his attitude toward all with whom he had to deal. He was unwilling to permit us any freedom in operation of trains or to turn over to us any fixed amount of rolling stock or promise that any given amount would be placed at our disposal even under French management.

The British had met with the same difficulty, although by persistent effort they had eventually received satisfactory concessions as to operation. Up to this time only a limited number of trains had been allotted to our use and these at such irregular intervals that our service was more or less haphazard.

We were confronted with an increasing demand for rail transportation which the French could not fully appreciate. In their own way they appeared to be making an effort to aid us, but Claveille undertook to keep track of every detail of operation, even to the allotment of each piece of transportation to this or that use, and we were left in a continuous state of uncertainty.

He would not believe that there could be any method better than that of the French, which we regarded as antiquated. There were nearly enough damaged or lost cars and engines here and there throughout France to supply our needs if they could only be put in order, and I offered to send out experts to assist in locating them.

Gen. Atterbury

With the object of obtaining control over our own movements of trains, with our own railway organization, Gen. W. W. Atterbury in charge of our rail system, and I had already made several visits to M. Claveille's office.

Remains Obdurate

Again seeing him January 21, 1918, I asked that authority at ports, so far as rail transportation and port management were concerned, be concentrated in one official, to which he agreed, although it was not done for some time. He also promised better co-operation in furnishing cars, but he had done that before.

We proposed that the French should turn over to us a fixed number of engines and cars and let us run them ourselves, but Claveille was obdurate and would make no such concession. It finally became necessary to take the matter up with M. Clemenceau before we got any consideration of this suggestion.

With the growth of our armies and the consequent greater need for port and rail accommodations our situation threatened an early crisis not entirely indicated in my letter to the secretary.

The question of getting our men overseas as rapidly as possible was being emphasized by both the French and British then. The British had made an offer to transport a number of battalions for service with their divisions, as mentioned in the preceding chapter and in my letter to Secretary Baker. I gave my views of this offer as follows:

"Although in serving with the British we should not have difference in language to contend with, the sticking point of the thing is service under another flag. If human beings were pawns it would be different, but they are our own men and we should therefore study carefully our national sentiment and the attitude of our enemy and the people toward the proposition.

Wants More Men

"Generally speaking, the army would be opposed to it, officers and all, but really the question presented is, can we afford not to send over extra men to help our Allies in what may be an emergency when the necessary extra sea transportation is offered and we have the spare men? As already cabled, there is less difficulty in sending over men than material, and men will probably be needed before the material can be obtained and the men trained to use it.

"If we agree to this we must insist upon our men being returned when called for, or at least when we get over the remainder of the organizations from which they may be taken, and, besides, we must insist that the British and French both do their utmost until we can come in with a well-organized and well-trained force large enough to count.

"We must look forward to bearing a very heavy part in this conflict before it ends, and our forces should not be dissipated except for a temporary emergency. Moreover, it is unnecessary to say, when the war ends our position will be stronger if our army acting as such shall have played a distinct and definite part.

"The Supreme War Council seems to be busy at work on vigorous studies, although its status as yet is not very clearly defined. The opinion generally prevails that its function is only that of an advisory body, although it is credited with having a certain political aspect.

"There seems little probability of a Supreme War commander being selected, nor, as I am informed, is in generally favored, especially by members of the council. All the allies want concerted action, of course, but for the present, thorough understanding and close liaison between the high commands appear to be the only solution."

Schedule Conference

On that subject I had been dwelling in conversations with Premier Clemenceau and with Gen. Sir William Robertson, the British chief of staff. I desired to see especially some harmonious military understanding as to plans of operation for the spring and summer of 1918.

There was full accord with my view and a conference was set for January 24, 1918, at Compiegne Field Marshal Haig, Gens. Petain, Foch, Robertson and myself, and chiefs of staff in the field, Gens. Lawrence and Anthoine and Col. Boyd, were to be the conferees.

My diary of that date notes that arrangements were made for the 26th Division to go into a quiet sector with the French near Soissons on February 5.

Gen. Bell

Among guests at my headquarters that week were Gens. J. Franklin Bell and Thomas H. Barry. It was a pleasure to see both Gens. Bell and Barry and find them deeply interested in all they had seen. Both were looking forward eagerly to service in France.

It was well known that Gen. Bell was, and had been for some years, in poor health. In fact he spent some time in the hospital while in France. Later they were both found physically unfit for service, very much to my regret, as they would have taken high positions in the American Expeditionary Forces.

Gen. Bliss returned from Washington at that time to be our military representative on the Supreme War Council.

Policemen Accused In Station Drinking

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Alleged drinking parties in the Belgrade and Clearfield streets police station led to the suspension of the acting captain, the house sergeant and two patrolmen by Director of Public Safety Lemuel B. Schofield.

The patrolmen, whom Inspector Howard Sutton reported having caught drinking beer in the station house, also were held under $400 bail each for a further hearing on the charge of illegal possession of liquor. Those suspended were Acting Capt. Edward A. Byrnes, House Sergt. John H. Gemender and Patrolmen Howard McKee and Bernard Kowolka.

'EAST LYNN,' 'BUGS' BAER ON RADIO

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

Toss a coin in the air, let it drop on "Ten Best Bets," and you have as good a choice for the evening as we can write about.

We are attracted particularly to the announcement that Hank Simmons is to present "East Lynn" on his imaginary Show Boat, WJAS at 10.

"Bugs" Baer leads "The King's Horses" to WCAE at 8:15. If it is anywhere near as good as played by Ben Bernie we're sure you'll like it.

Vee Lawnhurst is the evening's new star. She appears on KDKA at 8:30 with another new group, "The Handy Boys." Earle Spicer sings "Chloe."

* * *

Speaking of Ben Bernie a moment ago reminds us that a Pittsburgh sports writer has requested that we say something about Ben's "unmasked tenor"—Pat Kennedy. Visit WBBM some night and hear Pat sing "Baby's Birthday Party" or "Sleepy Town Express."

* * *

* * *

Tampa, the magician, has been signed to appear with Billy Jones and Ernie Hare at Carnegie Music Hall February 18 and 19. "A Day in a Radio Studio" is to be presented by Islam Grotto.

* * *

Husk O'Hare, of WENR, didn't turn up in the Daisy De Voe episode, but nevertheless he has a case on Clara Bow. Twice now Clara has telephoned long distance for request numbers "played with satin-like smoothness."

* * *

QUESTION A DAY:

Is Henry Burbig on the air any more?—Elsie R., Turtle Creek.

Answer—Free lancing with Norman Brokenshire. He may be heard eve. Saturday night at 7:30 on WABC.

* * *

Dr. S. H. Goldenson, Max Shapiro and Max Franklin are to appear on KDKA and WCAE tomorrow in behalf of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies.

* * *

DO YOU KNOW—

THAT Sergt. Michael B. Ellis (KDKA tomorrow at 6:15) is credited with capturing 44 German prisoners single-handed?

THAT Will Rogers is paying their expenses?

THAT we've never seen Little Jack Little (WCAE tonight at 11:15) in a plain white shirt? Jack started his career in Pittsburgh, always appeared at the studios in colored shirts.

THAT Louis Mason (Clem Betts of "Moonshine and Honeysuckle") is a native Kentuckian who was drafted particularly for his role by NBC and Lulu Vollmer, author of the sketches?

The LOUDSPEAKER

—By LOUIS REID—

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—In their search to satisfy the demand for the unusual the broadcasters have tracked down the minstrels of the mountains. The slopes of the Blue Ridge have been scoured by the radio men in the hope that hill-billy troubadours may be found, may be lured from their huts for the quick and easy money of the microphone.

The mountain folk were quick to catch on. They heard the knock of opportunity on their doors and opened them widely. The news spread rapidly through the Blue Ridge and soon, it is said, every family boasted a group of hill-billy singers. Many were called and many were chosen. But the demand still exceeds the supply. The parlors of the republic clamored for more mountain minstrels, and the search goes on.

* * *

Ex-cowboys who once ranged the southwestern plains have heard of the radio success of hill-billy warblers. They, too, are forming for a march to the microphones, to sing the homely airs of their frolics and round-ups.

The movement will probably extend to other class groups in the republic—to the miners of Pennsylvania, the lumbermen of the Northwest, the wheat threshers and reapers of the prairies, the stevedores of the New York waterfront.

* * *

Wonder why no anthology of bathroom ballads has ever come off the presses. Perhaps, it is because the list is inexhaustible. Favorites for such work—and it's time Sigmund Spaeth started upon it—are "On the Road to Mandalay," "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," "They Didn't Believe Me," "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles," "I'm Always Chasing Rainbows," "I'm Just a Vagabond Lover."

* * *

All of the veterans of musical comedy have been heard on the loudspeakers with the exception of Richard Carle. He, too, should be enlisted. He might disclose a personality on the radio as chatty and breezy and amusing as that which he used to display on the stage. Nor have we heard any of Carle's old songs on the air—and we are thinking especially of "I Picked a Lemon in the Garden of Love."

DON'T TRIFLE WITH A COLD

Break It Up In a Jiffy With Something You KNOW Does the Job

THE thing to do with a cold is to break it up in a hurry—with something you know does the job; not to trifle with a lot of trick ideas and remedies. Colds are too dangerous to experiment with.

Get a box of Hill's Cascara Quinine at any drug store. Take two tablets now. Then follow directions on box. Drink lots of water, too—that's all.

Soon that miserable aching feeling begins to go. The cold breaks up. The poisons are moved from your system. The world looks like an altogether different place.

Those results come because Hill's goes back to first principles by going to the seat of the trouble. It's not a new-fangled fancy idea but a tried Fuchs' Profit Proposal. Ball-Deadening Ideas. Willard Turns on Ring. Town Hall Athletic Aid. Baer Defeated Again. Savoldi as Wrestler.

HOLDOUTS REJECT DIVIDEND GAMBLE

IN SUPPORT OF his contention that a ball club should be expected to pay its players only in proportion to its profits, and that the demands of some of the players are unreasonble in view of the possibility that their employers may finish the season in the red, President Emil E. Fuchs, of the Boston Braves, laid a new profit-sharing proposition before his rebellious athletes. It was his answer to half a dozen holdouts who had returned their original contracts unsigned and demanded fat increases in the salary terms.

Emil E. Fuchs

Fuchs countered with a proposal that each of the dissatisfied pastimers take a chance on the 1931 earnings of the club. He suggested that each holdout waive his salary for the year and join with the clubowners in the gamble as to whether the season would prove a success or a failure. The boss of the Braves did not get very far with his idea. Every one of the six holdout players to whom he submitted it as a means of settling the salary argument turned it down quickly and flatly.

FUCHS' OFFER WAS that if the discontented would forfeit their right to draw salaries he would give them instead dividends out of the profits, if any, in proportion to the number of players on the roster during the season and according to the club president's estimate of the relative value of the various players. In short, he gave them the privilege of gambling that the club's profits for the season would be greater than the payroll.

Thus, if the payroll totaled $150,000 and the club cleared $300,000, admittedly a rosy supposition, the athletes taking a chance on the profits would pull down twice what his salary would have been. If the profits fell below $150,000 he would receive less than the amount of his salary and would lose something on the gamble. Fuchs was willing to give them the chance without charging them any interest on the large investment involved, but none of them would risk the gamble and they're still holding out for bigger salaries than were first offered.

SOME OF THE other major league magnates probably will not approve the profit-sharing plan of the Boston mogul. Several say they have learned by experience that such a system will not work out satisfactorily. One of them is President Barney Dreyfuss, of the Pittsburgh club.

The Pirate owner says that in 1921 he offered the Pirates a percentage of the profits in addition to their salaries if they would keep hustling. They hustled only for a while and then let down, he relates, finally blowing up in the middle of August and kicking away a pennant lead of seven and a half games. Yet he kept his bargain and split more than $30,000 among them, when he felt, he says, that some of them should have been fined instead.

"IT IS ALL RIGHT to deaden the ball somewhat," says an American League magnate, "but there is a danger of going too far with it. I think it would be more sensible to experiment first with one feature, either the cover or the stitches. If this does not deaden the ball as much as desired, then try both of them. The American League will work along this line, first trying the ball with the raised stitches. If that proves sufficient, the experiment will end right there. If not, we may go in for the heavier cover."

Jess Willard

THE FIGHT GAME would appear to have been kind to Jess Willard. He did little for it in return. He won the world heavyweight championship in 1915 because Jack Johnson, according to the latter's own admission, laid down to him, and when he was dethroned by Jack Dempsey in 1919 he became the first and only heavyweight champion who ever lost his title while sitting down. He sat in his chair and refused to come out for the fourth round.

Yet Willard now declares he is unable to see anything worth while in the ring sport. "I'm through with fights and fighters," he is quoted. "I'd never sanction my son, Jess, Jr., entering the professional prize ring. In fact, I want him to have nothing to do with professional athletics. College football, baseball and other athletics of that type are O. K., but the professional boxing racket—never."

WILLARD HAS A HUGE open-air market in Los Angeles, a beautiful home at Glendale and a fortune to keep him in ease and comfort for the remainder of his life. The average fan may be tempted to wonder what the former champion would have now were it not for the game he frowns upon and calls a racket.

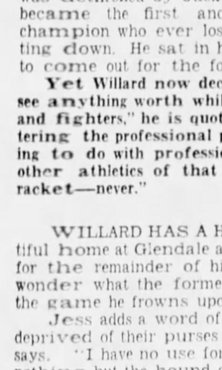
Jess adds a word of contempt for foul fighters. "They should be deprived of their purses and denied a chance to box a champion," he says. "I have no use for anybody who fouls. To me, low punching is nothing but the hound coming out in a fighter."

THE LONG-FELT want which the promised Town Hall will supply in indoor sports locally will be in evidence again tonight when the Pitt and Notre Dame basketball teams meet at the Stadium. The Panthers' quarters cannot accommodate a crowd as large as that which will want to see this contest, and there is no question that if a bigger arena were available here the game would be witnessed by several more thousands of fans.

BASKETBALL interest here is as strong as it is anywhere else, or could be made so under the right conditions. The crowds of 10,000 or more that attend games in the Middle West probably would be equaled or approached in this city on occasions such as tonight if there were accommodations for an indoor gathering of such proportions.

Local promoters would have brought a major league professional floor franchise to Pittsburgh but for lack of a hall large enough to make it profitable. It was for the same reason that a major league hockey club could not be operated here with financial success. The Town Hall will mean a local boom in basketball, hockey and boxing, among other things.

AGAIN IT HAS been demonstrated in the case of Max Baer, through the decision which Tommy Loughran won over him last night, that you've got to have more than a punch to get by in the upper strata of fistic society.



Joe Savoldi

A wallop is a big asset only when your able to land it, and Baer's Eastern failures against Ernie Schaaf and Loughran, to say nothing of his unsatisfactory showing against old Tom Heeney, indicate that he still has considerable to learn before he will be ripe to mingle with the heavyweight toppers.

IN THE GYMNASIUM of the Commercial Club in Los Angeles, Jumping Joe Savoldi is training daily for his debut as a professional grappler to be made in Kansas City in about two weeks. Of course, they're depending on Joe's Notre Dame football reputation to make him a drawing card, but they're piling on the press-agent stuff in addition, and Billy Sandow, manager of Strangler Lewis, who is interested in Savoldi, says (for publication) that no other pupil ever showed such quickness to assimilate the fine points of wrestling. Savoldi himself is learning the publicity racket rapidly. He says he is turning wrestler so that he can earn enough money to send his brother to college and to attend law school himself. He hasn't said anything yet about paying off the mortgage on the old homestead.

GAMES TONIGHT.
Syracuse at Pittsburgh.
Detroit at Buffalo.

By CARL W. SHATTO.

The Yellow Jacket puckmen, who have been aiming at fourth place in the International League race for the last several weeks, will have to train their guns on the hockey heavens when they strive for new laurels at Duquesne Garden tonight, for their opponents are to be a flock of stars—the Stars of Syracuse.

Although dangerous foemen the Stars are not exactly all that their name implies, and the local skaters are optimistic regarding their chances of snapping their losing string and getting back into the fight for a play-off berth. Syracuse has taken such strong teams as Buffalo, Windsor and Detroit into camp in recent weeks, but the Jackets have captured three wins and a tie in five previous meetings with the Stars, and they are confident that they can turn the victory trick again.

Tonight's game is just another contest to the last-place visitors, but to the Jackets it shapes up as one of the utmost importance. Next week the locals are to meet Cleveland and London in two home-and-home series. Cleveland and London, practically deadlocked for third and fourth places, are the teams blocking Pittsburgh's path to a play-off berth, and the Schooley skaters are determined to regain their victory stride at the expense of Syracuse before engaging in these crucial battles.

WANT EARLY LEAD

In issuing final instructions to their stalwarts today, Charles Reid, coach, and Roy D. Schooley, president and manager, urged the Jackets to strive for a commanding lead in the first period tonight, and then "coast through" and conserve their strength for the test in Cleveland tomorrow. The Stars, no doubt, will do their best to make this plan very difficult of execution, and if the visitors have one of their on night, they are capable of making the locals travel at top speed all the way.

Holmes, Syracuse's big center, is right up among the leaders in goal getting, and Markle and Pelangio are other dangerous shots who will require considerable watching. The Jackets base their victory hopes on the fact that the Stars' defense is not particularly strong, and they aim to give the visitors' backfield a heavy bombarding right at the start of the joust.

NO INJURIES

The Jackets sustained no injuries in their rough game in Windsor Tuesday, and three days of practice has served to put them back at the top of their form. The Stars will have to do a lot of fierce battling to register an upset.

Although the Jackets lost their last two games here, they provided so much thrilling action that the setbacks did not dampen the enthusiasm of local fans, and another capacity crowd is in prospect for tonight's fray. The probable lineup:

Pittsburgh		Syracuse
Cox	G	Gray
Fraser	D	Hughes
Berlett	D	Teasdale
Ouellette	C	Holmes
McCurry	W	Markle
Gregg	W	Paddon

Rohe, Former World Series Hero, Here

George Rohe, the first modern world series dark horse to come out a hero, is in Pittsburgh on a swing he is making around the big baseball circuits in quest of employment with one of the major league clubs. An attack of illness forced him to give up steel mill work, which he followed after the close of his diamond career, and later he was a newspaper reporter in Columbus, O. Only a few months ago his wife was taken by death.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: DUKE DE ARTOS WORE A SILK HAT 6 FEET TALL—Tomas, duque de Artos, a wealthy Spanish refugee, who lived in Paris from 1830 to 1880, was a picturesque "boulevardier," chiefly conspicuous for his extravagancies of dress. Withal he was a cultured man of the world, and the "colossal piece of headgear" he affected was merely an incident in a life devoted to the rigors of men's dress. This account is contained in Carlos Espartos' "Memoires." MAJ. NEWELL—Years ago, Maj. E. Newell was with the General Tom Thumb troupe, famous midget performers. At the age of 17, he was only 27 inches tall and weighed only 23 pounds. Among his many talents were singing, dancing and impersonation, but the most difficult was that of skating on a block of ice 16 inches square. This suggestion came from Maj. Newell's nephew, Samuel A. Jacobus, of 72 Ninth avenue, Newark, N. J. FLOATING ICE WILL NOT OVERFLOW A BUCKET—Ice, having a density only 0.9175 of that of water, always will project above the surface when floating. However, it displaces exactly its own weight and when melted will occupy no more volume than is displaced.

VANG ENGAGES ARTILLERY

The weekly contest of the Pittsburgh Polo League tonight at the Hunt Armory, East Liberty, will bring together the One Hundred Seventh Field Artillery team and the riders representing the Vang outfit.

A feature of the clash will be the introduction of the handicap system. Although the officials have not worked out the detail of the procedure, they stated that Tommy Ward, Paul Mazuzan, Dave McCahill and Steve Madden would draw the maximum handicaps.

The two battles staged in the circuit thus far have attracted big and satisfied throngs, the generous patronage indicating there will be big crowds each Saturday. The Field Artillery boys are in a tie with Shady Side for the leadership of the league. The big gunners will make a strong attempt to break the deadlock in their favor in tonight's game. Play will start at 8:45. The lineup:

ROVERS BATTLE PIERPOINTS

By TOM BIRKS.

Only one soccer game will be played this afternoon, Pierpoint hooking up with the Rovers at Leslie Park. Clan Douglas is leading the league by a margin of two points over Pierpoint, although it has finished its schedule, while the Ekequist eleven plays its last game this afternoon. If the Pierpoints are successful, they meet Douglas in a post-season series for the championship. A win for the Rovers and the Clansmen take the title.

Manager Ekequist will field his strongest club. Moreman will be at center to keep the attack going, while Yates and Murray will be on the last line of defense. The game will be called at 3 p. m.

By JESS CARVER.

The Notre Dame and Pitt basketball teams, Doctors Red Carlson and George Keegan, and a swell case of what is technically known as "plastic iritis," which is what the afore-mentioned Dr. Carlson is bragging about at present, will be on view in the Pitt Stadium tonight for the avowed purpose of putting on a basketball game.

Bill Newbold.

This plastic iritis is important in that it came very close to reducing the number of feature attractions for tonight by one. Plastic iritis is an eye infection, which rendered the peppery Carlson hors de combat for the past week, kept him by his own fireside Tuesday, as the Panthers whipped Wash-Jeff, and came dernied close to keeping him there again tonight.

CARLSON ON HAND

Dr. L. N. Mitchell, attending the ailing mentor, made a thorough examination yesterday and then gave Dr. Red the o. k. to be on the bench tonight, but otherwise, ordered him to stick close to home. The ailment is serious and it may be some weeks before Carlson will be entirely recovered.

Pitt is out tonight to resume booting the Irish where it left off a couple weeks ago in South Bend. On that occasion, the Panthers won by an eight-point margin, 28-20, in an overtime battle. Last year, the locals annexed both games of the home-and-home series.

The Panthers have done a trifle better in scrapping through their schedule to date than have the Irish. Pitt has won 15 out of 18 games, while the Irish have won seven out of a dozen.

LINEUPS IN DOUBT

The lineups which faced each other in South Bend will not inaugurate festivities tonight. Neither starting lineup is definite, nor will they be until the last minute, but indications are that Al Wrobleski and Doc Kowallis will go at the forwards for Pitt, with Albright at center and Willie Arture and Don Smith, at the guards. Pitt's setup is new.

For Notre Dame, Bill Newbold, a letterman and an outstanding performer, and Crowe will match shots with Wrobleski and Kowallis. Capt. DeCook is to duel at center with Albright and Burns and Baldwin or Baldwin and Gavin be placed at the guards.

In a preliminary tussle, the Pitt freshmen will attempt to take Kiski's quintet to see what makes it click. If it does,

Geneva On Top

A capacity crowd witnessed the annual invasion of Duquesne University's gymn last night by Geneva College's sparkling Covenanters, chaperoned by the famous Doodle Douds, one of the Beaver Valley's best. The invasion was highly successful, the Genevians romping away with a 27-19 triumph, which was more decisive than the score might indicate.

Kenny Loeffler's young men came to town about a year ago and knocked the Dukes squarely out of a chance to bid for the Tri-State Conference championship. The Dukes are out of the Conference now, but they had hoped to wind up the campaign among the leading aspirants for the district title. Te going will be tough from now on. They needed that one last night.

PITT PASSERS PLAY IRISH

Paced by Capt. Lindsay Montgomery and Cliff Aultman, who banged in 13 points between 'em the first half, Geneva sported a 16-8 lead at half time. The first 16 minutes of play was a nightmare to the Dukes, who were unable to record a single field goal. Ganzy Benedict finally popped in one. It was expert work at the foul line that kept the bewildered Dukes in the ball game, the locals sinking six out of eight.

GENEVA TAKES LEAD

That eight-point lead was maintained, and, at times, even improved, by the Covenanters in the second half when Monty added three more buckets to his total and Aultman and Minute Man Grahame each accounted for one. The Dukes did very much better during the second period. Brud Stephens counting twice from the floor and Benedict and McGeever once each. But the best the home boys could do was to hold Geneva all even for the half at 11-11, which sort of playing never will whittle away an eight-point advantage.

The sterling play of Kent Sole, at center for the victors, was not the least of the Geneva highlights for the night. Sole not only held McGeever in almost complete check, but his work in getting the ball from the backboard was of concrete value to his team's fortunes.

DAVIES RILED

Coach Davies, of the Dukes, was all steamed up over Geneva's so-called block play and he took the officials, Cal Bolster and Der Maxie Hannum, to task between the halves. Coach Loeffler also got into the argument but Bolster and Hannum started talking about the weather and Chick finally stalked into the dressing room, where I imagine, he told his players a thing or two.

The entire program for tonight in this sector is very interesting. At Meadville, Westminster and Allegheny clash in a return battle, Allegheny being out for revenge. Grove City plays Thiel at Greenville; West Virginia and Wash.-Jeff clash at Huntington; Bethany moves against Wash.-Jeff at Washington; Western Maryland probably will have another one on Penn State at State College; Broaddus plays Clif Battles' West Virginia Wesleyan to you at Buckhannon and Clarion and Slippery Rock hook up at Slippery Rock.

The Geneva-Duquesne lineup:

Geneva—27		Duquesne—21
Manning	F	Bonner
Fair	F	Anne
Sole	C	McGeever
Montgomery (C)	G	Benedict
Aultman	G	Perri

Jurist to Peruse Landis Evidence

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley had retired to his home at Danville, Ill., today to ponder over a mass of evidence in an effort to reach a decision that may break or will reaffirm Kenesaw Mountain Landis' dictatorship over organized baseball.

Judge Lindley decided late yesterday to take under advisement the Milwaukee American Association Club's petition for an injunction restraining Landis from interfering with the transfer of Outfielder Fred Bennett to the St. Louis Browns.

LOUGHRAN EASY WINNER OVER MAX BAER

The biggest crowd of the indoor fistic season—12,000 persons—saw the Philadelphian jab his way to a ridiculously easy 10-round decision over Max Baer, willing but clumsy California youngster, in Madison Square Garden last night.

Stepping around with all his old-time speed, Loughran stabbed Baer off balance with a stinging left jab all evening, evaded almost all of the youngster's wild rushes, whipped over right uppercuts when opportunity presented itself and won the unanimous decision of the two judges and Referee Jack Dempsey. The Associated Press score card gave Loughran all 10 rounds.

Building Up Big Fights

By IKE DORGAN, The Man Behind Tex Rickard's Fistic Ballyhoos.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Tex Rickard, after vainly trying to interest his Western bankroll friends in the Argentine, finally came back from that country—broke. Not a new sensation with Tex and one which always spurred him on to the big moments in his career.

Jimmy Johnston

Tex Rickard, "clean," as they say in his country, was a thinker, and it was with his pockets empty and his head full of "idees" that he landed in New York.

Tex went back to the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, where he was well known. Gambling was flying high in those days. There was a whale of a "game" in or around the hotel. Tex was well liked and picturesque. He knew everybody worth knowing and many of his friends were high fliers. He became a come-on, a steerer, a copper for the games! Casual conversation in the lobby of the hotel would roll around to the subject of pulling Lady Luck around by the nose and Tex would tell of a "place he knew about."

Perfectly legitimate, so they say. Tex always was mum on the subject and resented being kidded about it. Good or bad, it was an occupation that kept Tex up in the chips for a spell at least, although that $50-a-day suite that he occupied ran into real money at the end of every week. There he remained until opportunity again reached in and dragged him out into the limelight.

MORAN VS. WILLARD

He was going through the lobby of the Claridge Hotel one day when he came across Frank Moran. The big red head had been taking it easy following the two victories over Jim Coffey. He had been over his head in debt before winning those fights, but I'll say this for him. He sat down and wrote out checks by the basketful, paying off every dollar he had owed, and he kept on writing them until he was broke. He had been staked generously in Paris while waiting for that Johnson money.

All of this he had paid off, so when Rickard met him and said suddenly:

"Moran, will you take $15,000 to fight Jess Willard for the title"

Moran nearly swooned, but, quickly recovering himself, replied:

"You'll have to see Ike Dorgan about that, Tex. I've got all the money I want, but, if he wants the match, you can fix it up with him."

And off walked Moran, as poor as a church mouse just then, willing to let me do the gambling and the gabbing.

MATCH IS CLOSED

It didn't take Tex and myself long to make a deal. I asked for $25,000 and Tex, down to a dime, and, without batting an eye, said:

"I'll give you that amount and $2,500 for yourself just for stringing along with me."

I thanked him and when I met Moran later told him we were getting $27,500 and the pair of us did a gavotte around his room.

Willard had asked for $60,000 and training expenses, which was pure profit to him as he did his training at an old club in the Amsterdam Opera House in Forty-fifth street, New York, at a dollar a crack to see him go.

Tom Jones was with Jess then, and he wasn't letting any dollars run down the alley.

Rickard's entry into New York boxing was in the nature of a "crashing" to the other promoters. They had had the Willard and Moran match for the asking, but they didn't ask. They never were able to see as far ahead as Rickard, and that's why he always left them twiddling their thumbs.

DICKERS FOR GARDEN

Now, in the first place, Tex didn't have a place to hold his fight. Jimmy Johnston had control of Madison Square Garden. Tex asked me if I thought he could rent the place. I told him it was a cinch if he paid enough. I never dreamed he'd go as high as he did.

"What will be enough?" he asked.

"Better see Johnston about that. He's a tough egg to do business with. Don't let him know that you want it badly."

Tex saw Johnston and offered him $1,500 for a night's use of the Garden, that being $500 more than the standard price. Johnston laughed him out of the place.

Tex came back the next day with $1,000 added to his first bid. It cost about $800 a day to maintain the old Garden and directors of the corporation always were hungry for rent. When they heard Rickard was looking for the place for a single night they became interested. Jimmy kept saying "No" to all of Rickard's bids.

A $17,500 RENTAL

Tex met Jimmy down at the Waldorf one day, and Johnston swears Tex had two witnesses planted behind the pillar when he made a latest offer of $8,000 for a night's renting fee.

In any case, the next day Johnston was called in on the carpet by the directors and upbraided for not having accepted such an amount. That's why Johnston knew Tex had the two Garden spies planted to report back to the directors. It was the largest amount ever offered for Madison Square Garden for one night up to that time.

Johnston told his bosses to be patient, that he had Tex on the hook and the bidding was anything but closed. And he was right. Tex wound up by paying $17,500 for the night's use of the famous old showhouse.

Tex drew $154,000, an unheard of amount for an indoor bout up to then, and Jimmy Johnston scratched his head and the others rubbed their chins, wondering when and how they had gone to sleep.

THE INDOOR "BOWL"

Tex built up the main floor until the arena resembled a bowl. That idea still prevails in "The House That Tex Built" the new Madison Square Garden.

There are removable steel lifts, on which the end arena seats are placed. Rickard created the idea with the Willard and Moran fight, and, although expensive, carried it out with the building of the new place. He certainly could lay it on the line. After all, that was what made him.

Boxing Notes

The Motor Squ[illegible] club reports its heaviest advance [illegible] the season for the Johnny Datto-[illegible] bout next Monday night. This battle was a "natural" when the pair first met, on New Year's night, because several previous pairings between them had fallen through, and, when Datto failed to finish the local Negro star after having him on the floor four times in the second round, a clamor went up for a return match. Jackie sought it and Datto was glad to grant it, and so they're tapering off today for the shindy.

Tony Herrera boxes Sully Schwartz, the English lightweight, in the semi-final to the Vince Dundee-Len Harvey 12-round return bout in Madison Square Garden, New York, next Friday night.

Jack Dempsey will referee the main bout of a local talent show in Erie next Friday night. It is reported he will receive a guarantee of $2,000 for the evening.

If King Tut and Billy Petrolle, are rematched for Madison Square Garden, New York, as planned, it will be their sixth meeting. Billy won the first [illegible] a foul, and the second by the [illegible] route. Tut won the next two, sending Petrolle to a hospital for repairs to the fourth clash. Then, last Monday night, at St. Paul, he knocked out the conqueror of Tony Canzoneri and Jimmy McLarnin in 24 seconds.

Don't let anyone tell you we don't have the makings of a lot of good referees around here, and all we need to develop them is to have the boxing commission grant them licenses and give them an opportunity to work. Billy Lewis, former boxing pro at the Keystone A. C.; Bill Simendinger, Charley Whiteman, C. J. (Red) McDermott and M. J. Connors, whose activities so far have been confined to the amateur ranks, all are smooth-working officials with a lot of promise.

James (Red) Mason has purchased a half-interest in the stable of Jess Miller, of the Homewood A. C., headed by Billy Holt. Holt, by the way, wants to fight Jimmy Belmont or Billy Rose.

Willie Davies will meet Britt Gorman, of Minneapolis, instead of Johnny Sill, of Detroit, in the six-round windup of a show in Cleveland Monday night. Sill, an Italian, is about to be deported for overstaying his leave in this country.

Ramey and Strub Battle to Draw

ERIE, Pa., Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Wesley Ramey, 132, Grand Rapids, Mich., and Maxey Strub, 137, Erie, fought a 10-round draw here last night. Lynn Jordan, 162, Akron, O., Negro, won a verdict over Henry Attel, 162, Youngstown, O., in six.

BUCK QUICKLY TURNS TABLES AT MOOSE

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

Knocked down for a count of nine by a left to the jaw as he was pummeling Frankie Palmo, of Cincinnati, along the ropes late in the second round, Buck McTiernan, of Swissvale, thrilled the boxing fans at the Moose Temple last night by coming back in the third round to knock his opponent "dead" with a bombardment of punches that had him out for many minutes.

The bout was one of the most exciting in which McTiernan has engaged recently and brought out for the first time the so-called "killer" instinct many fans had been complaining was lacking in his makeup. He was relentless in the task of polishing off his foe after the latter dropped him heavily and rendered him groggy with that one punch.

Palmo had all the better of the battle right up to the tap of the gong for the third round, and from then on he didn't have a chance. The final round was just 1 minute 8 seconds old when the referee completed the toll of 10 and then helped in the difficult task of resuscitating Frankie.

M'TIERNAN FLOORED

The visitor rushed McTiernan at the beginning of the opening round and fell down as he let go a left hook. He kept going, however, swinging and hooking with both hands, and hit McTiernan more often than the latter usually is struck in a half-dozen rounds. He did not appear to pack much of a wallop, though.

Palmo continued the aggressor at the start of the second round, but, about midway in the session, McTiernan suddenly began to step in. He nailed Palmo with a right that forced the Cincinnatian to cover up, and retire into a neutral corner. Buck stalked after him, following up the opportunity, and, as Palmo got out of the corner, he found himself propped against the ropes by McTiernan, who was shooting the works for a knockout. Suddenly, out of a clear sky, Palmo brought up his left in a long swing and it went home to Buck's jaw, spilling him heavily. Buck began to pull himself up at the count of three, but was groggy and reeled against the ropes for support. At nine, he reached his feet and moved to close quarters as the round ended.

KNOCKED OUT COLD

McTiernan knew he had Palmo badly hurt before himself running into that damaging left, and he went out for the third round to put the finishing touches on the bout in a workmanlike manner. Forcing Palmo against the ropes in almost the exact spot that saw the heated action in the preceding round, he punched away with both fists until he had Frankie dizzy. Then, when Palmo worked away from the ropes, Buck pursued him and finally nailed him with a finishing right that dropped him flat on his back, out cold for the count and some five minutes besides.

After the bout, Bunny Buntach, McTiernan's manager, announced that Buck will undergo operations on both hands next Monday which will keep him out of the ring for several weeks. He has a watery condition under the middle knuckle of his right hand and the left is injured between the thumb and forefinger. Dr. George A. Sarraf is attending him.

The semi-final also ended in a hurry, with Jocko Walters, Negro, of Springfield, O., 157, stowing away Billy Thomas, of Cleveland, 159¾, in the second round. Walters, who recently knocked out Al Becker in one round at the Moose, hit too hard for the willing Thomas and the latter was down for two counts of eight from rights to the body and fell down once and was wrestled down another time in the opening round. He went down for nine from another right to the body and then was floored a fourth time in the second round and was being counted out when his seconds tossed in a towel at the count of four. The referee's action in halting the count at this signal alone deprived Walters of credit for a complete knockout and entered the result into the record books as a technical kayo. The second round lasted only 57 seconds.

HARRY FINE WINS

Harry Fine, of the Hill, 139, handed Tiger Joe Clark, Negro southpaw, of the South Side, 139, a drubbing all of the way in the second bout, and Jackie Coogan, of Canton, O., 134, handicapped by an injured right arm over most of the route, dropped a decision to Joey Bazone, of McKeesport, 134¼, in the opener.

Al Grayber refereed all of the bouts. Frank Brown and Frank Ferris were the judges and A. C. Couch and Tommy Grant the timers, with Ray Eberle the announcer and Dr. M. R. Goldman the commission physician. It was announced that Mose Butch and Marty Gold would box the main bout next Friday night, but this match was canceled immediately by Promoter Apples Meyers when the crowd did not react favorably to it. A new one will be made today.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Feb. 7.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

The Englishmen come over again and showed us what speed really is. It wouldn't be so bad if they would break the records in their country, but to come here and do it right under our very nose; and we are supposed to be so fast at everything. That is just like us going to Oxford and speaking better English than they do. Some American tried to assassinate Mussolini. We are in bad enough at home without some nut trying to get us in worse abroad. They are not going to get that Mussolini. He's too foxy even to get assassinated. Your, Will.

Paul Lukas Being Groomed For Starring Roles, Rumor Has It

By HARRISON CARROLL.

(Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 7.

Studio rumor declares that Paramount is grooming Paul Lukas to take William Powell's place in the new program.

At any rate, the story department is showing real activity in seeking vehicles for the Hungarian actor. His next picture, after "Vice Squad," will be "Widow's Evening," a forthcoming magazine story by the popular I. A. R. Wylie. Film rights were bought this time before publication.

Paul Lukas

Lukas was one of the first victims of the talkies, but, by assiduous study, he has greatly improved his English. Though in Hollywood only four years, he already has become an American citizen.

According to a letter reaching Hollywood, Douglas Fairbanks has been surf-boating with Duke Kahonamoko off the beach of Waikiki.

HE'LL BE AN AGENT, TOO

"Well, if you don't want this one, what kind do you want?" asked Brown.

LATEST GOSSIP

John Barrymore, of all people, collects autographs. He says they are for his baby (Ha! Ha!) . . . A little church sitting back from one of the film colony's principal thoroughfares bears the quaint name, "Hollywood Wedding Chapel" . . . Anita Stewart shortly will go into vaudeville . . . James Hall is bound for New York to spend four weeks as master of ceremonies of a new Warner Brothers theater. Jimmie has a new house in Hollywood with a pipe organ in it. On his return from the East, he plans to open one of those gilded barbe, shops and shine parlors on Hollywood boulevard. The patrons will be entertained with jazz music . . . Anita Page has had an option taken up at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer . . . The Chester Morrisses leave almost immediately for a two-months' stay in Europe. On his return, Chester will star in "The Corsair," an expose of high-jacking in gangland . . . Noah Beery finishes his contract at First National on April 1. He will freelance.

MR. JACK OAKIE FOILS GANGSTERS IN FILM IN ALDINE

By MILDRED FILLMORE

Jack Oakie, who has been the comic sailor hero in several movie displays, is now appearing in the Aldine in "The Gang Buster," He's on land in this one. But he's still "at sea." Goofy Oakie—and how!

He sells insurance and gets mixed up with gangsters in this one. He bumps hardboiled gentlemen on the head with a monkey wrench. He wrecks up a perfectly good room in a free-for-all battle with the gang leader. And he wins the girl. Her name is Jean Arthur.

Gangster motor cars zoom through the night. There is a kidnaping. An old, but ritzy mansion is the center of a big gun battle.

Vaudeville

RONALD COLMAN FINDS ELEPHANT AND DOG ARE REAL RIVALS

By GEORGE SEIBEL

What is a hero anyway? They have a peculiar notion of what constitutes heroism out in Hollywood, to judge by the sort of stories they provide for their handsome stars. Ronald Colman is one of these stars. He has a face and a manner that are supposed to give the flapper palpitation of the heart. So Frederic Lonsdale, English dramatist, is engaged to furnish a picture story in which Ronald can do his stuff.

George Seibel

"The Devil to Pay" is the result. It's just another one of those pictures in which the hero is a good-for-nothing loafer who has a way with the ladies. Both Loretta Young and Myrna Loy love him. Even his dog George loves him. It is hard to understand why they don't love the dog, who shows no symptoms of insanity or lack of intelligence.

You'll like that dog—and a trained elephant in the stage show—and the daring adagio dance of the Jack Randall Sextette.

"THE DEVIL TO PAY"

To get back to Ronald and Lonsdale, and their idea of what constitutes a hero, they ought to try it once. If they behaved for one hour like the Willie of "The Devil to Pay," they would land in a jail or a hospital. On the screen they are rewarded with 100-pound notes, win big stakes at the Derby and take the best-looking girl away from a grand duke.

This is the sort of modern fairy tale the modern flapper is supposed to crave. Some day a producer will put on a hero who isn't impudent and who works for a living. That will be a startling novelty.

Meanwhile we shall love George, the dog, and feel sorry that he wasn't taken along to see the very interesting scenes at the English Derby.

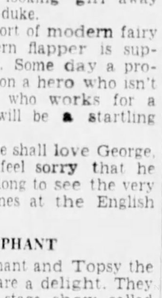
EVA THE ELEPHANT

Eva the elephant and Topsy the zebra likewise are a delight. They appear in the stage show called "Monkey Shines," in which the Chester Hale Girls also impersonate ferocious jungle beasts. Collins and Peterson are the comedians of the program, and got many laughs. But the Randall Sextette had everybody gasping or holding their breath.

Dick Leibert achieved excellent effects with the big organ, and young Robert Conche conducted the orchestra with as much vigor as last week—perhaps even more, since it was a "Hungarian Rhapsody" they played.

Boy, 9, Youngest In High School

Salvin (Sonny) Schmidt, 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Schmidt, of 526 Landleiss place, has the distinction of being the youngest student attending Herron Hill Junior High School.



Salvin Schmidt

The boy was graduated with honors from Minersville School Center avenue. He completed a six-year course in three years, and "skipped" four grades. He started school September 10, 1927, when he was just one day less than 6 years old.

Atterbury Awards Rail Safety Trophies

In presenting 20 trophies to divisions making the best showing in 1930, W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, announced that employes of the system last year set the best safety record in the history of the road.

The Central region, of which Pittsburgh is the headquarters, was awarded the regional trophy in the system-wide safety contest for the year.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

Night Club

The lights go dim and in the yellow spot,
The whispers die among the jaded throng,
And time turns back for butterfly and sot;
All suddenly they see the sorry plot
That gives the play called Life its hollow ring,
And they seem glad that banal words can bring

The song is done and silence steals away,
The spell is broken and the glomour gone;
A ribald, jazzy band begins to play—
Two hours to go before the break of dawn;
(The girl whose voice stirred something fine and clean, Sits down beside an ancient libertine.)

A Form of Criticism?

Alfred Friedman's contrib for today deals with the small-timers who had been playing the vaude theaters in the sticks. They came to Broadway looking for renown. After the audition for the booking agents, the agents told the lads that they couldn't be engaged because their act was too much like Amos 'n' Andy's.

Repartee

In the Izzy Elinson manner:

"Whad'ye say, kid, don't I look like a million dollars?"

"Yeah—in the Bank of U. S.!"

Heheheh

One of the theatrical journals tells about the vaudeville team of Doyle and Donnelly, who had spent most of the day waiting for "next week" in their agent's office. They went up to see the fire that wrecked the Lincoln Square Theater. After viewing the roaring furnace for an hour Doyle mumbled:

"Those eggs we laid up here last week ought to be fried by now."

Poke

How Embarrassing

"My, my," ejaculated a silly woman, "but you certainly are a witty fellow. You ought to be on the stage."

"My dear," replied the startled star, "my name is Eddie Cantor!"

"Oh," she answered, "I wouldn't let that worry me if I were you. You can use a stage name!"

Imagine

And David Murray says that business is so bad that his cousin had to borrow a match to start his last fire sale.

Add Pathfinders

Add Classics

"I don't know how newspapers and magazines got into the world, and I don't think God does, for He ain't got nothing to say about these in the Bible. I think the editor is the missing link we read of, and that he stayed in the business until after the flood, came out and wrote the thing up, and has been kept busy ever since. If the editor makes a mistake, folks say he ought to be hung; but if the doctor makes mistakes, he buries them and people don't say nothing because they can't read Latin. When the editor makes mistakes, there is a big lawsuit and swearing, and a big fuss; but if the doctor makes one, there is a funeral with flowers and perfect silence. A doctor can use a word a yard long without him or anyone else knowing what it means; but if the editor uses one, he has to spell it. If the doctor goes to see another man's wife, he charges for the visit; but if the editor goes, he gets a charge of buckshot. Any college can make doctors to order, but editors have to be born."

Meow!

First Chorine: "Why do you put so much powder on your face?"

Second Ditto: "To make me look pretty, dearie."

First Chorine: "Then why doesn't it?"

Observation

An "asylum," in Brooklyn, features a 19-foot bar on the first floor of a building which is playing to capacity every day and night. On the second floor of the same building there is a cabaret, which is crowded at all times and on the third floor there is another large bar hugged incessantly by nose-paint-fiends. One man owns the three hot-spots.

He hasn't had any police or Federal interference since he opened. He is getting rich so quickly he has vowed to retire as soon as he gathers his first quarter of a million smackers. This he expects to have by July 4.

O, Mr. Wilstach!

The Morning Mail

"Mr. Winchell: Bravo, Walter, for the expose in your column about these so-called philanthropic concerns. However, the employes of E. R. Squibb & Sons have none of these worries. We have been working on a five-day week basis for eight months, no reduction in salary and every position guaranteed for the winter. Such fairness and generosity deserves to be rewarded, as you will probably agree.—Agnes Teresa Gaul, No. 1438 Ocean Ave., Brooklyn, c/o Saunders."

Flipcrack

Just to be different when anyone phones Ted Saucier he says: "Well, go ahead, commence the conversation — you put in the nickel!"

Oop!

GRANT WITHERS SINGS AS STAGE FEATURE IN ENRIGHT

By MARGARET RUSSELL

Charles Bickford plays a double role of vagabond, suspected of murder, and a mountie in a Northwest Mounted Police story of the great North. "The River's End." Evalyn Knapp is the girl. J. Farrell McDonald plays an Irish guide whose philosophy is:

Zazu Pitts gets her usual number of laughs as the gossipy girl friend of the heroine. Bickford has a lot of trouble impersonating an officer whom he resembles, but wins the lady in the end.

The stage show is done in Spanish style with the orchestra dressed as toreadors. Bruno and Davis do a tango in green and red velvet. The Lassiter Brothers do a tumble-about dance. Miss Ottie Kruger, coloratura soprano, sings a song or two. Dick Powell and Grant Withers pretend they don't know each other's names as they josh one another. Withers sings pleasingly.

To Show Picture Of German Travel

Few travelers who have visited Germany have seen as much of the country as is shown by two films which Dr. Robert K. Treut has brought to America to further the charitable and cultural work of the Society for Germans Abroad. These films will be shown this Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Pitt Theater. One of them carries the observer through many beautiful parts of the "land of infinite variety;" the other, a delightful comedy including a charming love story with a happy end, depicts life in a small German city and shows interesting views of quaint old houses and narrow streets, with amusing and characteristic types of inhabitants. The lecture is under the auspices of local German societies and is free to all. There will also be a concert of German songs.

LEON ERROL IS GOOFY CROOK IN FULTON AND SHERIDAN

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Mr. Errol portrays a talkative crook who talks himself out of all kinds of tricky situations. And, at times, from an audience viewpoint, he talks too much.

A romantic department is introduced with Richard Arlen and Mary Brian in charge. She's a rich man's daughter and he's a college hero, who becomes a pantry boy at a health farm. They take a train ride, register the love-struck look and that's about all.

Most of the scenes—we almost said action—occur at the health farm. Mr. Erwin goes about shadowing people. Mr. Errol goes into goofy monologues and Mr. Arlen pops out from behind the pantry door.

Also, in a more goofier moment, Mr. Errol tries his hand at waffle making. And, lady, if you dislike your husband get hold of that recipe and make him some!

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Fires of Jealousy Scotch Up Many Romances

Yes, it is not. And Babe's the girl who knows it.

Time was when Babe went her blithesome way, careless and happy, like a regular flee white-n'-twenty-one chicken. But that was before Don entered her life. Now if she as much as glances sideways, our little scene up in smoke. Or lapses into sulks, and refuses to speak until she "begs and pleads with him not to be angry."

Don has a fine alibi for all this—to hear him tell it.

"It's because I love you so much, that I can't trust you," he bleats, when she tries to discover what ails him. And at first that line went over big with Babe. But now she's beginning to wonder.

"Dear Miss Martin—

"I hope you'll give me some help and advice. I need it badly. I have kept steady company with Don for two years, and have been engaged to him since last June. We had planned to marry this fall but, due to the present hard times, we decided to postpone our wedding until spring.

Doesn't Trust Her

"Here is my big difficulty. Don is terribly jealous of me, and it makes me perfectly miserable and unhappy. He doesn't trust me out of his sight. I have turned down all my other friends and even relatives so that he would feel sure of me. But still he has the same attitude.

"Before I met him, I was one of the most popular girls in my crowd, and I loved a good time. I have sacrificed all that for him, too. I have even resigned from all the clubs I belonged to, because he was jealous of the people I met there. I didn't mind doing all that for him and still love him. But it hurts me to see that, after all I have done for him, he still feels that I can't be trusted.

"He knows how much I used to enjoy having a good time before I met him, and he makes it his business to make remarks about that too. He tells me that it is because he loves me so much that he cannot trust me, and because I had so many friends before he met me.

"I just cannot understand him. I love him, and it seems natural for me to trust him, and I never think of questioning him about the girls he knew, before he knew me.

Losing Patience

"Are all men alike? It seems that a girl can't have a little innocent fun, without proving later to her fiance or her husband that she hasn't done anything wrong, and won't double-cross him.

"If we ever go out, which is seldom, even to a movie, and if I so much as turn to look around me when we're coming home he thinks I'm looking at somebody I knew once and, before I know it, he becomes angry and jaws about it. Or he won't talk at all until I beg and plead with him. I'll do anything rather than have him angry at me because I love him so much, but I don't know just how much endurance I have left. I am beginning to get to the end of my rope, and it is all getting on my nerves.

"Mother often talks to me about Don. She is afraid I won't be happy with him when our tastes are so different. And it hurts her to see me give up so much for him, when he does not appreciate it any more than he does. And I am beginning to wonder, too. His jealousy drives me crazy. I am weary of the monotonous evenings at home. I am getting tired of 'proving' to him that I love him and am true to him, when he won't believe me anyway.

"What shall I do? Please help me out. I will be watching for your answer. It means a lot to me as I am so puzzled I don't know which way to turn.

"BABE."

Well, honey. This looks to me like one of the times that mother does know best. And if you're wise, you'll listen to her. Because, if I ever heard of a gent who sounded like a dose of hives, your Don is it! No human being could be happy with a maniac like that in the family. And if you do go on and marry him, you'll be fixing yourself some home-made tortures.

You'll never be able to "prove your love" to him, no matter how hard you try. That's plain, from his present actions. You should never have allowed him to bulldoze you into trying. You should have called him when he first began his campaign of petty persecution. Certainly you shouldn't run around on a lot of other dates if you're engaged.

Cowardly Fears

But—it's obviously wrong and ridiculous for any man to ask a girl to give up all her social life just because he's happened to fall in love with her. There is no surer way of killing love, and making marriage a dreadful servitude, than the way Don is acting. Married people need friends and outside interests, if their marriage is going to stay vital and healthy and happy. And they need each other's faith and trust.

Don't let him kid you . . . or himself . . . about why he's like that. It is not because he "loves you so much." It's because he's full of cowardly fears . . . and a feeling of inferiority. He's afraid of competition and unwilling to meet it. So he's trying to hold you by locking you up where you won't see anybody or have a chance to compare him with anybody else. Don't let him get away with it.

Put it up to him straight that, if he can't trust you and treat you with the respect you're entitled to, you'll walk out on him. Tell him just exactly how his silly antics affect you, and how he is straining your patience and killing your love by indulging in them. And then stick to it. It isn't up to you to "prove" your love. It's up to him to prove his, by learning to act human. If he won't do that, give him the gate. If you don't you're going to be a mighty sorry girl before you're much older.

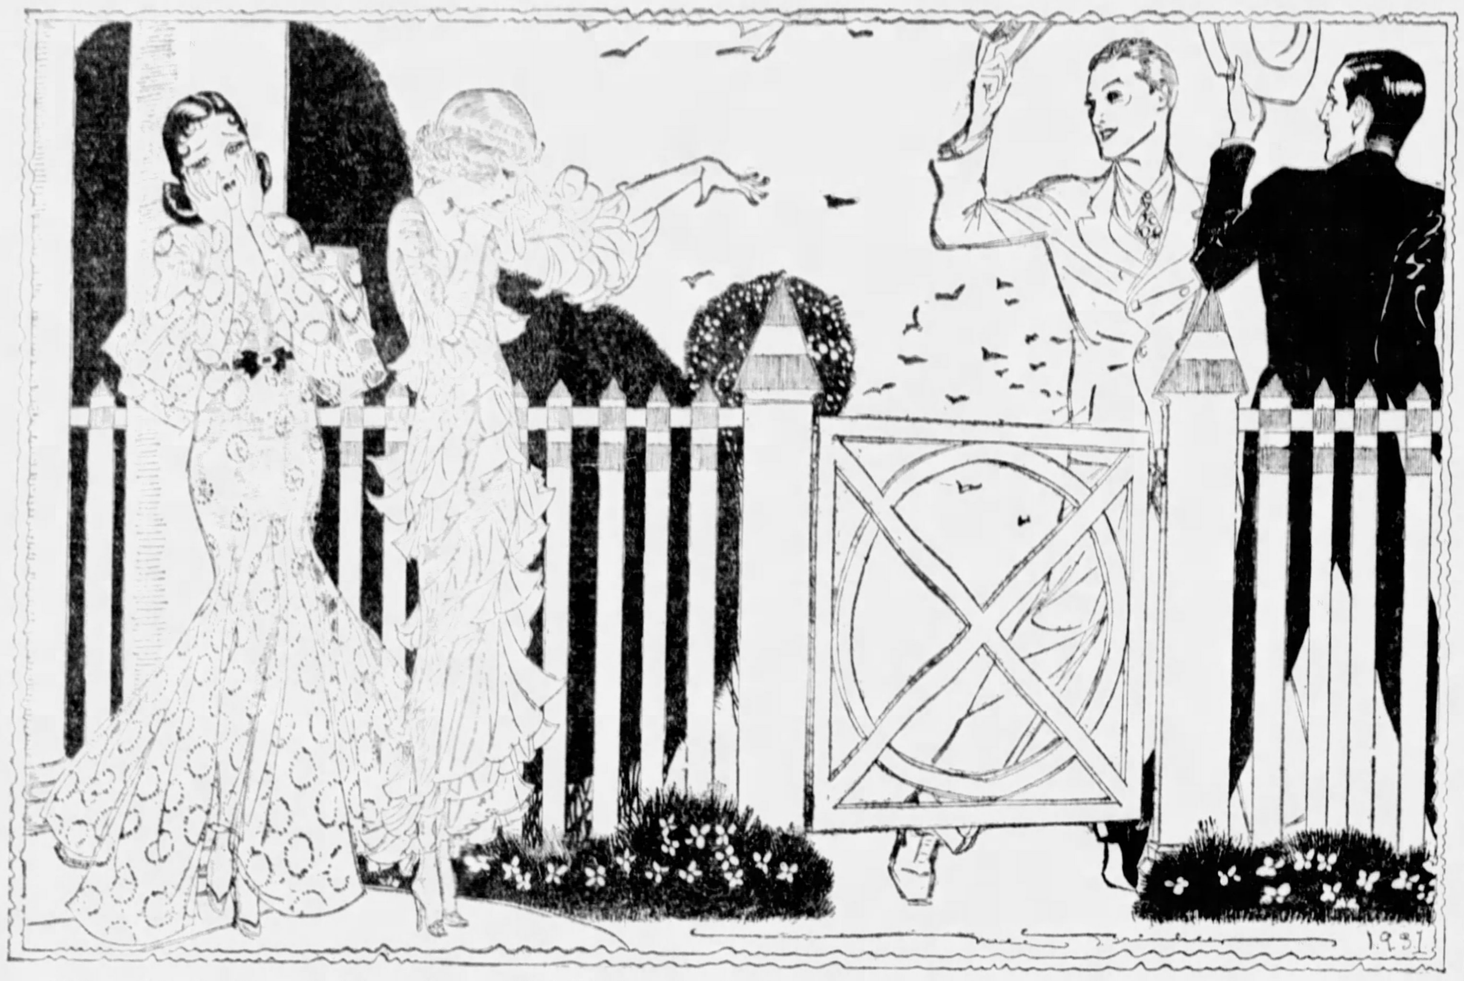
'TOO TALKIE!'

Drawn by NELL BRINKLEY



"Make a picture," said a pretty lady—pensive after a big party—"of two lovely girls losing two marvelous beaux. A good-bye my lover good-bye" picture. They, the two Prince Charmings, are going away for good, and the pretty girls are weeping bitterly and wondering if it is 'good-bye my lover good-bye,' WHY is it! And say that the reason is—because the Prince Charmings are tired of the talkies! The two pretty girls did not listen enough. WHY—I watched the plainest woman at the party the other night walk off with every man in the room right under the noses of the sirens—no less! She was dainty, and charmingly clothed in blue—by the way, a man's favorite color—but she was plain. And she said hardly three words the whole evening—sat in a series of trances before the eloquent tongues of a score of entranced men. All she said was "WONDERFUL!!!!"

"You say a word to the talkie-girls—say that nine hundred and ninety-nine wives out of a thousand, and five hundred sweethearts out of that thousand talk too much—they take the words out of the pained Prince Charming's mouth.

"And so he says good-bye!" NELL BRINKLEY.

How to Keep Well

By DR. COPELAND

Health Value of Foods High In Iodine Content

It is quite common to meet a woman who has a large swelling in the neck. This is due to a condition spoken of as "Goitre."

Dr. Copeland

In front of the neck, just beneath the skin, is a gland called the "Thyroid Gland." When this gland is normal in size it is not noticeable nor can it be felt. When enlarged it may assume huge proportions, becoming very conspicuous, particularly upon swallowing.

The thyroid gland absorbs the iodine contained in the blood. Iodine is converted by the thyroid gland into other substances, particularly a substance called "Thyroidin." This is an important process, essential for the normal operation of the body.

Disturbances of this gland result in various diseases. If the gland is over-active there may result an ailment known as "Exopthamic Goitre."

The most common disturbance of this gland is known as "Simple Goitre." This condition is due to a deficiency of iodine in the water or food. The gland increases in size and if not checked in its growth there may result serious nervous disorders.

This condition is particularly common in the so-called "goitre districts." In these regions the iodine contents of the water is low. As soon as the deficiency is corrected, which is usually done by the feeding of iodine in some form, the enlargement of the gland rapidly disappears. In the goitre districts schoolchildren are fed iodine tablets. In some cities iodine is actually added to the municipal water supply.

It is known that certain foods, notably salmon, carry iodine. The vegetables raised in South Carolina are found to be high in iodine content. You should talk with your doctor about the feeding of your children, particularly if they show any signs of goitre.

Besides those I have mentioned, there are other forms of thyroid disturbances. All of them require careful medical care and sometimes in advanced cases are only cured by operations.

Great strides in the study of thyroid diseases have been made during the past decade. This is particularly true in the field of thyroid surgery. Much suffering and physical disability have been eliminated by means of this progress.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Learns Something About Helena Brixton

It took me nearly half a minute to pull myself together again after Lillian inadvertently had prodded something deep within me, something which I had rigidly repressed for years. Her casual comment that I could not see Helena Brixton's viewpoint in her jealousy of Mary, because I had no daughter, brought into momentary flaming a longing which had been mine, a disappointment still keen, though buried beneath many layers of things less important but more exigent.

I buried it deep again in that half minute and turned my mind to that other utterance of Lillian's which concerned her young daughter and which roused all my combativeness on behalf of my friend's winsome young daughter.

"What do you mean?" I asked imperatively, stopping abruptly in front of a shop window. "No," as she made a movement to go on. "You stay right here, my lady, until I find out the meaning of that speech. You simply can't mean that you'd like to see Marion made uncomfortable by having Ronald pay marked attention to Mary."

There was a momentary flash in her eyes which told me that my disapproval had registered, but her answer was ready and undismayed.

"Guilty as charged m'lud," she said flippantly. "That's just exactly what I do mean. That affair is progressing altogether too rapidly. They'll be fancying themselves—engaged—if I don't look out."

It was a sentiment natural enough for the careful mother of a schoolgirl. But I knew that Lillian's flippancy held a jealousy of Marion's holding anyone before her which was almost abnormal, though understandable to those of us who knew the tragic separation from her child which had been her lot in Marion's infancy. It was a jealousy, however, which held danger in it, and ever since I had first noticed Lillian's reaction to the attraction between Marion and young Ronald Brixton I had been alert, watchful for the opportunity to save Lillian from some act which she might regret bitterly when her obsession—for I could call it nothing less—had spent itself.

Purposely I made my voice derisive.

"I may not be the mother of a sub-deb," I said slowly, "but I have had occasion to study many girls of Marion's age and let me tell you that the danger of those two children fancying themselves engaged is nothing to that of having Marion's faith in you weakened if you keep up this nonsense about her."

She started and looked at me with eyes which held something akin to fright.

"Marion's faith — in — me — weakened," she faltered.

"Just that," I returned sternly. "Your daughter's mind is as keen as her mother's—keener if your mental gymnastics concerning her in the last few months are indication of your power. Don't you suppose she's going to see through any scheme of yours to have Ronald pay attention to someone else?"

"You're begging the question," she said a bit sulkily. "I didn't plan this party with Mary as the queen."

"I know that," I said, feeling a few compunctions of my own on Marion's account. But I'm not deliberately maneuvering to have Ronald slight Marion and pay attention to Mary as you evidently are doing."

I realized the weakness of my position as soon as I uttered the words. That she wished to divert Ronald's attentions from Marion to any other direction whatever I was sure, but I had no warrant for my opinion in any words of hers, and I was not surprised when she said explosively:

"If you weren't my oldest friend, and devoted to Marion, I'd make you eat them thar words. I may not relish the idea of young Brixton blotting out all the landscape around Marion, but I'm not planning to make my child uncomfortable at a party, thank you. Instead, I'm going to take her down and buy her the prettiest sub-deb evening dress I can find, and a wrap if the other girls aren't going to wear their heavy coats. I'll call Helena up in a few minutes and find out about things. I won't do anything to have Marion outshine her mates, but, on the other hand, I'm not going to have her the Cinderella of the flock, and the only evening gown she has isn't anything to broadcast in the fashion notes."

"They have some marvelous things at K's," I said hurriedly, glad indeed, to have come out of the controversy without antagonizing Lillian. But I held the secret conviction that my intervention was, after all, a good thing, even if I had had no real foundation for my belief that Lillian would have been ready to sacrifice Marion's pleasure in the party, if she could lessen the child's romantic interest in Ronald Brixton.

Horoscopes

Sunday, February 8

Sunday's horoscope favors all affairs of a mystical, spiritual or secret nature, but also holds menace of discord and misunderstanding in domestic or purely personal relations. This, however, does not apply to artistic or social activities or friendship.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year in which negotiations with large corporations or with secret bodies may flourish and bring desired prosperity and advancement, but too aggressive measures or impetuosity may prove to be undermining factors, especially to personal harmony and happy environment.

A child born on this day may be endowed with many unusual talents of a business and social nature, particularly attaining its ends by stratagem and tact, although inclining to irascible and tumultuous impulses.

Monday, February 9

Monday's astrological forecast is fortunate for the growth of the possessions, real, personal and finances, with much stabilizing of the prospects of an independent nature, but holds precarious situations for those in the employment of others. Positions are in danger and should be safeguarded.

Those whose birthday it is are promised a year of growth, advancement and stabilizing of the fortunes through personal management and affiliations, but are in quite hazardous aspect if under the realm of employment. Possessions should increase through wise effort and judicious management.

A child born on this day should be talented, hard-working and ambitious, but may succeed better on its own account than in the employ of others.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Special Notes of Appreciation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I accompanied a friend recently on a visit to her relatives in a city where her boy friend resides. We spent a week there, and he arranged to have one of his friends act as my escort. The four of us went everywhere together, and we had a marvelous time, but her friend paid most of the expense of our entertainment.

Now that we have returned home, she is of the opinion that I should write a note of thanks to my escort, but as nothing was said about writing while we were there, I don't know just what to do. He was a very nice sort of chap, so of course I want to do the proper thing. What do you advise?

R. R.

Your friend shows excellent taste in her judgment about this, and most assuredly you should write a letter of thanks to this young man who was so especially kind and hospitable. Such kindness, such planning for your happiness and entertainment, needs a very special note of thanks, with a fine and complete expression of your appreciation.

Ask her also if she doesn't think that you should write a note of thanks to her friend for his planning for your pleasure. . . . I am sure that she will recommend this, too. We can't be too careful about writing these notes of appreciation.

And, of course, you did write your "bread and butter letter" . . . didn't you? . . . to these hosts of yours, and with it sent a gift of some charming kind.

When Taking Off Wraps

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When entertaining at home (dinner invitation) where service is formal, should a woman keep on her wrap until she enters the living room, or give it to the butler in the hall when her husband does the same?

2. When assisting at a formal tea (engagement of one's son to the hostess' daughter) do I mention the hostess' name or guest's name first, when introducing my friends whom she has not met?

3. At a large church wedding is it allowable for a matron of 60 years of age to keep on any type of wrap when walking down the aisle? A Spanish shawl? Or when does it have to be removed?

THANK YOU.

1. The woman guest takes off her wrap when she enters; she would not keep it on until she enters the living room.

2. Mention first the name of the hostess, for the guests are presented to her.

3. Usually, at a church wedding, the women wear their coats. They keep on their coats, also their hats and gloves. However, usually the mother of the bride, and sometimes the mother of the groom, do not wear coats. They plan . . . and especially is this true of the bride's mother . . . their costume as a perfect ensemble without the coat. What the bride's mother wears is very important, for it is she who is seated just before the entrance of the bride. And, if the wedding is carefully planned, no guest is seated after the entrance of the bride's mother.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Tired eyes? Lave them with water as hot as can be endured. Use thick pieces of gauze or cotton for the purpose. Then rub the eyelids and surrounding tissues with ice. Wunnerful!

There are almost no perfect feet. The majority of women have deformed feet due to ill-fitting shoes. Shoes to fit can be found but the average woman doesn't try to fit her feet; she fits the ideas that are in her mind, and considers looks more important than utility and comfort. 'Nuther matter, gals don't walk enough to keep foot and leg muscles strong.

Multiple chins are no beauty bargains. The fat lads who reduces at top speed will make her twin chins more unsightly because tissues will sag. Best treatment is to cut down on the quantity of the food gradually, turning away from sweets, fats and starches, and to demolish the fat cells of the offending facial feature by annointing with a heavy cream and rolling the flesh firmly between thumb and finger.

Sleep is a beautifier, one of the grandest. Eight hours every night; nine are better. Go to sleep with the mind free of worries. No need of hanging onto worries, new ones are always on the way.

Placing rouge low on the cheeks makes the face look hangdog. The higher up the rouge is put on, the more the eyes are played up and enlivened. A nice trick is to sweep the rouge around in a circle on the cheeks, leaving a white spot in the center. Nature often puts on delicate cheek paint in that intriguing pattern.

Persistent dandruff will give way to repeated oilings and shampooings. Start in a war to last one week. Every night rub into the scalp a quantity of vaseline, hot olive oil or mineral oil. Lay a thick towel over the pillow to protect it from the oily topknot. Every morning give a rousing old shampoo. When the week is up repeat once a week. After that once a fortnight will be often enough.

This Woman In 4 Weeks Lost 17 Pounds of Fat

Here's a letter written October 21, 1929, by Mrs. Fred Barthauer, of Lewistown, Montana, that ought to be read by every overweight woman in America.

"Gentlemen: I started taking Kruschen every morning as directed as I was very much overweight and wanted to reduce.

I had tried many other remedies but got no results. I felt so miserable and had no energy. Just long as I decided to give Kruschen Salts a fair trial. I am glad I did, for it convinced anyone.

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts four weeks costs but $.75 at any drug store in America. Take one half teaspoon in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning. To help reduce swiftly cut out pastry and fatty meats and go lightly on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar.

Any man or woman, fat man or woman, who want to reduce in an easy way, get a bottle of Kruschen Salts a fair trial. I am sure it will convince anyone.

Household Hints

The knitted suits and sweaters are very likely to sag at the shoulders and in this way spoil their appearance. A bit of ribbon the length of the shoulder of the person from neck to armhole, attached securely at each end of the sweater, will prevent the shoulders from sagging.

Sometimes slippers appear to fit perfectly, but after they have been danced in several times they develop a habit of riding down off the heel and prove very uncomfortable. Place a patch of adhesive tape around the inside of the heel of the slipper and see if that does not help this difficulty.

Besides thermos bottles play an important part in stimulating sweet dreams. There is relaxation in the mere knowledge that one can wake at any hour of the night and be refreshed by a cool draught of crystal ice water and that without stepping out of bed. Getting up and dashing about the house for a drink of water often awakens one so completely that sleep is not coaxed back again for hours. But in filling the thermos it is important to remember that the lining is delicate and ice dumped carelessly into the container will probably be disastrous. Place the ice and water in another container first and when the water is thoroughly cold pour carefully into the thermos.

It takes but a few minutes to put the living room in order before we retire and there are times when we rejoice that we employed those few minutes in this fashion.

Teach the children the proper care of books by having shelves in the bookcase devoted to them and insist that the books are kept in an orderly condition and put away after each using. An inexpensive book stand for the child's room will encourage an interest.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy cheeks—sparkling eyes—most women can have. Dr. F. M. Edwards for 20 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a substitute for calomel made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients, naming them Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. Know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, causing a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, take one of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets now and then to keep fit. 15c, 30c and 60c.

SEEKS DIVORCE, CHARGING HIS WIFE DRANK

Husband Declares He Was Locked Out While Liquor Party Went on in Home

The Harry J. Hillenrichs lived happily together for nearly 20 years and then, in the fall of 1926, according to a bill of particulars filed by Hillenrich in his divorce suit against Lilian Hillenrich, she began to go out almost nightly, to be brought home at a late hour in a drunken condition, by strange men.

Hillenrich says this kept up for two months. One night, he charges, he returned late from work and found a liquor party going on in his home. He was locked out and had to get the assistance of a policeman to get in. He adds a charge that his wife once chased him out of the house with a knife, and says she neglected their three children. Hillenrich lives at 209 Wynooka street and his wife at 2870 West Liberty avenue. They were married in 1907.

After 38 years of married life, Mrs. Anna O. Brunn, 60, of 739 Clarissa street, has filed suit for divorce in Common Pleas Court against Louis Brunn, 3406 Perrysville avenue, who, she declares, has an estate of $100,000.

She has filed a petition for alimony and counsel fees in connection with the suit in which she claims she is destitute and has had to rely on friends and relatives since she and her husband separated December 4. She charges Brunn with cruelty and indignities. The couple married May 5, 1893.

Duke Finds Hired Girl Hiding in Closet

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Connie Calvert shares her home and fortune with her half-sister, Kitty, whom she found destitute in New York's underworld. Kitty falls in love with Jim Tracy, Connie's former fiance. Believing Jim to be a fortune-hunter, Connie, to save Kitty, enlists the aid of Duke Garson, Kitty's friend and underworld intelligence man. He warns Connie that her butler is a crook and that her mother should guard her pearls. Later, Duke [illegible] about to declare his love for Connie when Jim appears. He [illegible] he was held up and is afraid to go home. Connie invites [illegible]y. Duke doubts Jim's story. That night, Mrs. Cal[illegible]is are stolen. Duke questions the maid about them. [illegible] doubts Kitty's honesty. Mrs. Calvert becomes ill after the excitement. Duke accuses Jim of lying about being held up. Jim says he lied because he did not trust Duke and wanted to get back to the Calvert home. Connie tells her mother that she is not sure whether she loves Duke. Duke seeks the butler's aid to solve the robbery mystery. The butler suspects the maid. While out riding with Connie, Duke says she is a new thrill in his life. When he kisses her she is powerless to resist. Late that night Connie is alarmed when she hears a noise in the house. She summons Duke.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER LIV.

Stealing along on slippered feet, Connie and Garson reached the end of the hall where one flight of steps led upward, and another down. In the offset formed by the landing there was no trace of an intruder.

Connie's voice was hushed. "Someone disappeared right here."

"Sure?"

His fingers clutched around her arm protectingly.

"It looks like something is beginning to stir," he whispered. "There's not a chance in a hundred that you're going to get hurt, dear, but won't you—to please me—go back to your room?"

Connie Courageous

Her lips defied him, tenderly, adventurously, perversely, she took a delight in showing him that she had no feminine timidity. As a matter of fact she had not the slightest fear, because her faith in his courage, his resourcefulness was without end.

To have him near—to be with him always—

How brave she was! How dear she'd become to him!

"Whoever it was could have gone either upstairs or downstairs," she informed him, softly.

Garson did not answer her at once, but stood silent and erect. In the half light he was a strange, almost bizarre, figure in his silk pajamas, his slippers and the long, tailored-looking bathrobe. Despite his tall slenderness the wide shoulders of Duke Garson bespoke compelling strength. His hair, ruffled from the pillow, gave him an aspect of wildness, new to Connie.

"That door—what is it?"

In her familiarity with the house, Connie had overlooked the door set in the flat jog of the wall. Her eyes were so used to it that it had produced no impression at all. Besides, there was nothing to pique the imagination, no suggestion of a hiding place. Behind the door was a shallow closet no more than 18 or 20 inches deep and as wide only as the door itself—a receptacle for brooms, dust cloths and fuzzy mops for hardwood.

"The mop closet, but it's too small—"

Garson stepped closer to the door until the toe of his foot rested against it—obviously a preparation against any possible outward plunge from whoever, if anyone, might be concealed within.

"Get back!" he whispered to Connie.

"No—what are you going to do?"

"I'm going to open the door."

An impulse to stay him came to her, but, with an increased beating of her heart, she was stirred suddenly with an excitement, an expectation, that wiped out both fear and caution. Her desire, all at once, was burning and intense; a realization, flashing over her, illuminated what she had overlooked.

Find Maid Hiding

The easiest thing possible for the prowler would have been to slip into the closet, a hiding place close at hand and offering a quicker shelter than flight either up or down stairs. Still, while she had been in Garson's room there had been time for the person to have slipped out and escaped.

On the other hand, this was not certain; in the darkness of the closet the hidden intruder would have had no means of knowing but that someone was standing outside silently holding a revolver and waiting. It was like opening a lid of a jack-in-the-box and waiting to see what popped out.

Garson's face was set; his left hand clutched the knob, and Connie saw his strong right fist clinch. For a moment he hesitated, and then, with his eyes, drew her close to him, his lips were within a few inches of her ear.

"I've a better plan," he whispered. "You open the door and pull it shut against yourself as you stand close to the wall."

Thus, she was quick to see, would provide her with a screen, a barricade.

"I'll stand on the other side and grab him before he can start any trouble."

The thrill of stimulation ran through Connie. This was strategy, action, a quickening interest tingling through all past futility. She nodded.

Instinctively, he tightened the cord around his waist; the robe was loose enough about the shoulders and his legs to give him ample muscular freedom.

When he was set, tensely, he nodded the signal for her to turn the knob and pull the door.

Inside the closet, pale, narrow, standing straight as an Indian, stood the blazing-eyed form of Mary Smith!

DAILY TRUE STORY — She Knew Him When

There was unmistakable "class" about it, and about the haughty chauffeur in a uniform that matched the color of the car.

There was an actress for you!

"Let me see—I was married in 1910, 20 years ago—Patricia Terry was quite a star then—she must be pretty old."

Patricia Terry was 48. Off stage she looked to be 30. On the stage—well, sometimes no more than 16.

The driver slowed up to turn into one of the West Forties, and then at still less speed swung into the rather narrow blind alley that led to the stage door.

"There's poor old Gregory Upton," she said to her maid. "He is probably waiting to catch me—I hate to turn him down, but he is so impossible, now. You don't remember him?"

"A little; not very well, Miss Terry."

"How are you, my dear?" he said. He was of the old school and always addressed the ladies from 5 to 90 as "my dear."

"Hello there, Gregory," Patricia answered, brightly.

"I hear that Oliver is going to the coast for a picture," Gregory said, trying to keep the eagerness out of his voice.

Worries About Daughter

"I understand it was. Now, my dear, if he does go, there's a part I can do—you know that."

"I will do what I can, Gregory—be assured. Oh, dear, it takes so long to dress. I must run. Good luck to you, Gregory.

Gregory Upton stood there, staring at the door, trying to assure himself that all would be well. But he knew Patricia Terry very well, indeed. No need to lie to himself. If she intended to give him the part she would never have equivocated.

"Like what, Amy?"

"The 'I knew them whens,' the people who were good once, but have lost their talents."

"You are right, Amy. Gregory is one of the 'I knew him whens'."

But Patricia Terry had other things to think of. She had to get herself mentally ready for her role. And among the letters on her table were some bills that set her thinking.

She glanced over one from Mme. Riguard, for three frocks at an altogether too high a figure, and the note:

"For Miss Haldean."

Miss Haldean was Patricia Terry's one child, Patty, just out of finishing school at 18. Patricia had not married until she was 30.

Outside, Gregory Upton, a week later on matinee day, awaited Patricia Terry. Oliver was going to the coast. That was certain. And he had heard that Barnes was slated for the part. He didn't want to believe it. He wanted Patricia to tell him so, herself.

Patty Haldean rushed in through the stage door just as the matinee was ended. She was a sweet girl, and wonderfully dressed. Gregory knew her well. He had helped amuse her when she was a little tot back in her mother's dressing room.

Overhears Conversation

Gregory had an inspiration. He would follow her in. It would make her mother recall those days when he helped care for little Patty—in those days when he had been a leading man and more than once had helped Patricia in some difficult role.

He edged his way back stage to dodge the stage hands who were getting ready for the night's performance, and finally came to Patricia's dressing room. The door was open. There was a tiny foyer so that people passing could not look directly in. The inner door was open.

"Patty!"

"Patty! Of all persons, Joseph Yardon!"

"Why, he's famous, Mother—a great star! And he's such fun and wonderful!"

"Patty, darling, Mother knows. He is a terrible man, a man every mother of a daughter fears and hates—keep away from him!"

"Hello, Patty dear," Gregory called.

The girl glanced around at him, but her thoughts were too clouded for her to be natural.

"Oh, hello there," she said, and hurried away.

"My dear," Gregory called, "what's all this I hear about Barnes having Oliver's role?"

"I—I don't know, I'm upset, Gregory—terribly upset, about Patty."

That night at 10 o'clock, Patricia Terry was nervous. Patty had promised to be there by nine.

But Patty was 20 blocks away, in a corner of the Eldarno Club. She was sitting with Joe Yardon, sipping a sweetly insidious drink known as "Pink Lady."

"You'll be a riot, sweetheart," Joe was saying.

"Thanks to you, Joey, dear."

"Of course, Joey. Mother'll get over it, she thinks I'm just a kid, and——"

"Miss Haldean!"

"What?" Patty snapped, crossly.

"It's about your mother—a stroke or something—she wants you—"

"Oh, my God!" Patty cried.

Patty Gets Angry

"She'll be all right, Patty—"

"Patty will tell you what her plans were," he said.

Patty broke down and confessed Gregory had heard them plan as he stood behind the car that afternoon.

"I knew you when, Greg," she said, "when you were wonderful, but you were never so wonderful as you are now Oliver's role is yours."

Dear Sir—

I am a branch bank manager, and I was quite annoyed the other day when a long line of depositors formed at the door and stretched half way around the block. I was afraid people might think the depositors were attempting to withdraw funds. To avert suspicion I hurried out and put a sign over the door announcing that soup was being served inside.

DO NOT LET THIS LITTLE TRICK FOOL YOU!

Police have issued a warning against a very clever bunco trick practised by a well-dressed lady who refuses to give them her name and telephone number. Gaining admittance into the victim's home, she asks the host or hostess to guess in which hand she holds a valuable wedding ring. She promises to give the ring to any one who guesses correctly, but should the player fail to guess correctly he or she must pay a penalty. Of course, no one guesses correctly, as the little lady has no wedding ring. She merely has her fists doubled up so she can extract the penalty, which is a sock on the jaw.

Charges Against Succop

Taxpayers Will Want to Know If Their Money Is Being Squandered—Brief Comment on Local News.

For some time there has been an undercurrent of gossip concerning the manner in which the City Department of Supplies is administered. Now comes John D. Houston, wholesale grocer, with a direct, definite accusation, which he makes openly and which he undertakes to substantiate by offering facts and figures. The way is thus paved for a formal investigation of Director Bertram L. Succop's management of his office. That Mayor Kline or the City Council will fail to conduct an inquiry seems hardly likely.

Houston says that in purchasing food supplies for the inmates of the city welfare institutions Succop has ignored the low bids of local concerns and almost invariably given the contract to the highest bidder, a Philadelphia company. The Philadelphia company, according to Houston, has "very powerful influence." It will be pertinent to ask him exactly what he means by that insinuation. The taxpayers will want to know if their money is being squandered. It may not be for the grand jury to inquire, but some body with power to require witnesses to testify under oath should investigate.

It has taken Uncle Sam a quarter of a century to get started on the construction of Pittsburgh's new postoffice and federal building, but it must be acknowledged that he now seems to be trying to make amends. It will gratify Pittsburghers to learn that in asking for bids for the erection of the building the Treasury Department has stipulated that the contractor must begin the work immediately.

Two men have been arrested at Ambridge, charged with distributing Communist literature among school children as they left the Harmony School. It might be thought to be an ironic commentary on the situation that the town of Economy, which has become Ambridge, was founded by Communists. They practiced Communism, in the sense of having property in common, for the greater part of a century. The Harmonists who founded the town were a religious sect, however, to whom the Communism and atheism of the Bolsheviks would have been anathema.

That was an interesting competition conducted by the Luther League of St. Luke's Lutheran Church, West View, to determine how many Bible verses the contestants were able to quote. Apart from the spiritual benefits that may be derived from familiarity with Holy Writ, there is practical advantage in the ability to quote freely from it in public speaking or writing. Biblical quotation is always effective, as many of our statesmen have demonstrated.

Young people of today probably are not able to quote Scripture as extensively as their grandparents. John Muir, the great naturalist, could recite from memory whole books of the Bible. In the age in which he lived, however, pious parents often compelled children to commit Bible verses memory as a disciplinary measure, with the result sometimes that the children came to hate the book. How much better to have young folks learn Bible verses as competitive recreation, as in the case of the West View Luther League.

Coroner W. J. McGregor's report of fatal acci- dents in 1930, showing 396 persons killed by automobiles in Allegheny County, a new high record, is disheartening. But if the statistics are analyzed encouraging features will be found. The number of children killed was 34 less than the year before. That seems to indicate that the new generation is becoming "traffic conscious" and holds out the hope that motor accidents will decrease.

A Sound Policy

Erection of Municipal Power Distribution Plants in Canada Have Had Beneficial Results.

The issue of cheaper power and the effective curbing of monopoly in this field grows more distinct and more with each day that passes.

But ...em is not confined to New York State. In every s... Union the efforts on the people's behalf to establi... rates base—that is to say, a fair valuation of the pro... id franchises of the companies, engaged in generating and ...stributing electrical power, as well as other utilities, have failed.

Such a basis is a necessary first step in the calculation of rates for service, which shall be fair to the consumers and to the companies. Without such a basis, the attempts of the Public Service Commission in New York State, and of similar agencies in other states to "regulate" rates, have proved utterly futile.

Their efforts have been swallowed up in a welter of litigation, conflicting and long delayed decisions of the courts, and company "lawyering" of the most artful and pestilent description, seeking to thwart and obstruct the public interest at every step.

Gov. Roosevelt, recognizing the collapse of regulation, has asserted that the state's water power should be developed BY THE STATE.

By the intelligent use of the authority and influence of his office, he has advanced the issue to its present clean-cut position.

His announced determination that the economies in the production of power by the St. Lawrence development shall be passed on to the house holder and the smaller consumer depends, however, for its realization on reaching a proper agreement with the existing monopoly, for the transmission and local distribution of the power so developed.

The Niagara-Hudson Power Corporation, as a result of recent mergers, holds a monopoly in the transmission field in the state, and the Governor purposes to create an agency or authority with capacity to make a contract on behalf of the state, for the transmission of its power, utilizing the corporation's distribution system and thus saving the state the cost of a duplication of it.

Duplication or paralleling of existing lines is accepted, however, as a possibility, should the negotiations looking to a fair contract fail, and is intended to operate as a persuasive factor in reaching a proper agreement with the privately-owned companies.

A BROADENING AND STRENGTHENING OF GOV. ROOSEVELT'S POLICY COULD INSTANTLY BE ACHIEVED BY INAUGURATING STATE-WIDE MOVEMENTS FOR THE BUILDING OF MUNICIPAL DISTRIBUTION PLANTS, ALONG THE LINES PURSUED WITH SUCH SUCCESS IN THE PROVINCE OF ONTARIO.

Canada has proved the soundness of this and many other liberal and progressive policies and the United States would be following along a beaten path in adopting the beneficial and successful measures of Canada.

* * *

* * *

When love endeth, a woman sigheth: "Alas, I am blighted and sick at heart!" But a man saith, "Thank heaven, I am CURED!"

* * *

A woman presseth a dead love away, as a flower, in the book of her memory. But a man burieth his dead loves deep and hasteneth to plant fresh flowers upon their graves.

In a woman's heart there is somewhere a secret shrine for every man whom she hath loved, and a cozy corner for every man who hath loved her.

* * *

* * *

For verily, verily, a woman liveth in her yesterdays and her tomorrow but a man liveth only in TODAY. And "the only woman" in his life is the girl of the moment!

* * *

Yes even while they look into each other's eyes and vow eternal love and "understanding," each seeth a different vision and gazeth at a perfect stranger!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Most of my life I have been plagued by well-intentioned friends with a notion I am not getting enough exercise. They look upon me as a sedentary sap—a sort of human barnacle attached to a desk chair. You'd think I had but one corpuscle and it was snow white.

The fact is I can arise and with no more exercise than a walk from the bed to the bath and then to the dining room wolf a breakfast that would shame a stevedore. All these some 40 years my only concern about feed is will my teeth hold out?

At 90 I expect them to be worn down to the gums and spend leisure hours snapping at vittles with jawbones. Almost daily some intimate breezes in from golf, squash or a horseback ride, puffing out his chest, slapping a thigh and giving me a pitying glance.

They seem to say: "You poor, chicken-breasted weasel! All you do is sit hunched up over a typewriter. What do you know about the great outdoors—the thrill of the hunt, the long drive on the green, the pungent odor of the pines and the zip of clean air?"

It strikes me as silly to pop out of bed the second you awaken, stand stiff legged and touch the floor 100 times, or sprawl on your back and kick at the ceiling. When I open my eyes I like to think things over, get my day's worrying done, then roll over for another nap.

Getting up in the morning should be a leisurely rite. A man should take time for his cold shower. There should be at least 15 minutes of indecision and mustering courage. I like to look out the window awhile, call up a few friends and otherwise dilly-dally.

When I can delay no longer I sneak upon the shower, give the faucet a quick turn and chatter a few anguishing: "Omigawds!" The same leisure should be achieved in dressing. Most of my friends dress like firemen, boasting they can do the job in, say six minutes.

* * *

Invariably I spend at least a half hour every morning looking for socks. No one can put them in such original places. I am what might be called a sock tucker. I have found one tucked under a radiator and another tucked in the handkerchief pocket of my pajamas. The minute I get hold of a sock I want to tuck it some place.

I am also something in the way of a garter snapper. When I adjust them each morning it is my custom to finish off with a sort of quick snap finale and many times 15 minutes or so later I find myself sifting in a chair gazing off into space and snapping away at a garter. In more irrepressible moments I accompany the snapping with a whistling tune. "Thank Your Father!" is best of all, but for a slow measured snap "Lover, Come Back to Me!" is not bad.

Men who have important work to do in the world I suppose cannot resort to sock tucking or garter snapping, but for the non-go-getters life in the early morning is greatly enhanced by these simple diversions.

* * *

A fellow should have ample time, too, in preparing for a new day to do his tooth paste tube squeezing. How many, with an involuntary shudder, have noticed those quickly pinched tubes dotting strange bath rooms—all flattened in the middle and just a mess? The directions say plainly: "Squeeze only from the end." For years I went through life squeezing paste tubes here and there, hither and yon and during the excitement of the Xmas season often willy-nilly. I've had them bust in the middle and curl at the edge. But today I squeeze the neatest tooth paste tube in our block. You can't go in for morning calisthenics and do a bang-up job of squeezing. It is either one or the other.

* * *

What happened? I started out writing something else. It is like that of late. I start to do a certain thing and suddenly find myself doing something entirely different. Yesterday my wife gave me $20 to pay one of her bills and before I realized it I spent every cent on a bunch of blue and white polka dot ties. It upset me terribly. O, yes, I know what I started writing about—exercise.

THE "OUTLINE" MOVEMENT

By Archibald Henderson

An interesting controversy, full of high lights and deep shadows, has recently been provoked by the contemporary movement for aiding the average man and woman in the search for knowledge. The movement really began some three-quarters of a century ago, when Huxley crusaded so vigorously and eloquently in behalf of Darwin's theory of evolution. During very recent years, the movement has taken on new impetus, largely as the result of the enormous increase in the technology and terminology of knowledge.

The bounds of knowledge have increased almost unbelievably during the past century. The specialist has taken the field in cohorts; and the man in the street finds himself dizzy and confused in the effort to understand what it is all about. The specialist has been wittily defined as one who "knows more and more about less and less."

As the technical vocabulary of science, for example, becomes more and more unintelligible to the average man, a great gap begins to yawn between life and knowledge, between the every-day world and the world of scholarship.

Many teachers, especially professors in universities, realized the gravity of the situation. But little was done to remedy it. Knowledge was becoming once more, as it had been in the time of the Middle Ages, the recondite possession of a monkish caste. Scholars were becoming more and more divorced from life.

Thought was delegated more and more to this monkish caste, the scholarly Brahmins of the universities and the research laboratories. The public was rapidly degenerating into a vast class of ignorant lowbrows, who, so far as intensive thinking was concerned, were quite willing to "let George do it."

The enemy of knowledge was thus terminology. To read a treatise on mathematics, physics, biology, chemistry was like reading Greek or Sanscrit or Chinese. It was necessary to learn the language of science, the strange new vocabularies, the weird words which sometimes used more letters than are to be found in the alphabet.

A new type of educator, the liason officer between scholarship and ignorance, made his appearance. Slosson and Kaempffert reached their millions through the columns of the daily press and the popular magazines. Distinguished scientists, Eddington and Jeans, Soddy and Millikan, Russell and Shapley, wrote books of great brilliancy and lucidity, smoothing the rocky pathway of science and attempting to lead the public in the way it should go.

James Harvey Robinson, Will Durant, H. G. Wells, Sir Arthur Thomson, for example, who felt deeply the loss of contact between knowledge and the masses sought to bridge over the gap. Outlines, popular accounts, stories and histories of various branches of knowledge, came into being and were strikingly successful.

These works have served a highly useful purpose. And there is no reason to believe that such books will be discontinued in the near future. It must never be forgotten that "there is no royal road to learning."

To permit other people to think for you is not the same thing as thinking of yourself. No one can do your own research for you; only you can do that. But outlines convey much information in brief compass. They spare the reader the necessity for immensely wide reading of a desultory sort. And they stimulate vitally the desire for the acquisition of knowledge.

Real Men Like Oak Trees

They Last, While Others Wither.

Plants, like men, differ. The cabbage is old in a few weeks. An oak tree at that age has hardly started.

The average man at 20 knows about as much as he ever will know and deteriorates mentally and physically from that time until he leaves this world for some other.

A real man, either of the two that you see here, for instance, improves with age, as does the oak tree.

These pictures are a rebuke to many Americans that talk about being old at 50 or 60. At 50 a man's best years should begin—at 60 the best 15 years should be ahead of him.

After carrying the load of the war on his shoulders from start to finish, first supplying money, then ammunition, then the policy that won, Lloyd George, photographed here on his sixty-eighth birthday, is as full of energy, optimism and courage as he ever was.

The greatest men in the big war were old men! Clemenceau died far past 80. He and Lloyd George won the war, defeating the young Kaiser and his young officers.

It isn't how old you are, but how old you permit yourself to FEEL that counts.

These two pictures prove it to you.

That Empire, as you know, was proclaimed after the War of 1870 with France, in the Palace of Versailles, the same palace in which a little more than 50 years later, the defeat of Germany and the restoration of Alsace and Lorraine, and other provisions of the peace treaty, many of them dangerously unwise and impossible, were proclaimed.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Breeding and educational advantages may cause you to feel more at home in a crowd with whom you cannot afford to go.

But if your breeding and education have been worthwhile, you are not so shallow as to endanger your savings plan to keep up with your friends.
